Thread: Would HF be interested in private IRC bot bins?

King - August 12, 2012, 5:25 pm

I know there are lots of these out there. But, still, I want to ask your opinions before working on it. Features include: 21kb Bin Size, IM Spread, Download & Execute, Botkiller, Sort, Sniffer Protection, Works On All Windows Versions, Easily Cryptable.

It will be set up for you if you don't know how to do it.

That's everything for now. So, would you be interested?

irc is old, people would prefer it to use an http base. But it's better than all of those public bots out there. The SYN modules don't even use proper sockets or proper packet manipulation

I see. Thanks for replying. I forgot to add that it's coded in C++.

I see you're giving us a lot to base an opinion from. Excellent features if I do say so myself.

>etc

It would be much more easier for me to even give an opinion of this if I knew what was really in it. You can't just release a product and basically say "<productname> has <2 features> etc" and expect anything from anyone.

Touch Me Maybe - August 12, 2012, 5:49 pm

How exactly is it private if it's being sold on a public forum and to anyone with money?

King - August 12, 2012, 5:51 pm

You're right guys. Getting more info right now. ?
My bad.

EDIT: Updated OP. ?

Deobfuscated - August 12, 2012, 6:02 pm

sniffer protection as in encrypted packets?

Psyman - August 12, 2012, 6:06 pm

With the updated features, I'd give you around ~$10 for a bin, with updates.

Not much in it, can easily be made by anyone.

@Orgy, it seems that you're sure that bots don't work there. I don't know really. Are you trying to be clever? I told you that I'm not very knowledgeable in these things hence I'm asking you.
