What data center are you putting them in?

If none, what kind of connection are they going to be on, and what redundancy are you going to have for power/internet.

Also, why on Earth would you put 1 vps per server? For a decent Dell blade you can get 10+ per server. If you're doing a 1:1 then you might as well rent them as a dedicated server, you'll get more money.

How much storage space is there on these ?

Bandwidth ?

etc ? I did a quick search but there's more than one model, so I'd like specifications on these before I move forward :)

This has changed to 60 ?

I'm interested in a whole Blade, not a part of it.

Maybe you could think of a price ? Oh and also, independent of the server specs, I'd like to know what kind of bandwidth/Internet connection you have and you think you could be providing in terms of upload/download.

MonEy - February 20, 2010, 11:47 am

Download/Upload speeds?

How much bandwidth can we use?

Price for the whole dedicated is $40/mo, i have comcast internet, and i'm sort of new at all of this but everything should go smoothly after receiving instruction and the blades.

August - February 20, 2010, 9:35 pm

Bump for my good friend and also i might be interested !!

Endonium - February 21, 2010, 1:39 am

You can reserve a whole server for me (that's 10 VPS). Of course I will want to see the full specs for both servers and bandwidth you'll provide, but from a general point of view, I'm highly interested.

iDarky - February 21, 2010, 1:47 am

Looks good i may be intrested reserve me a spot please ... i can host my botnet on here right :)

cgsmickie93 - February 21, 2010, 2:14 am

Before he was just going to host 1(one) VPS per server.

Now he is hoping he can get the right software to have 10(ten) virtual private servers per computer.

IMO, I think this will be to much for both of us to handle, which would cause support for the vps's..to be horrible... and All of the vps's are hosted on a home connection..LOL (10 mbs)..which is utter failure
