This month I'm Celebrating 15 Years in Hacking/Exploiting ?

I'm not gonna get much into my past but I'll tell ya alittle story about me and the hacking scene in the early 90's. I was in a Hacking Group with 30 members called I.H.R (Internet Hackers Revolution) for 6 years, back in the the day of Windows 3.1 and Windows 95. Hacking groups were everywhere on #IRC and we used to War on each other by using old school Trojans/RAT programs like Sub7 | Back Orifice and some social engineering.

Exploiting the internet was easy back then because nobody had anti-virus software which made it simple to send an trojan.exe undetected. Everybody was on a dial-up connection so you could flood (Blue Screen of Death) someone IP/computer easily with a UDP flooder (DDoS) Forcing them to restart there computer.

I quit the group in 2000 after they started hacking e-mail accounts and using credit card PIN#'s from people that bank online to buy shit.

Here's my FIRST website I made in 1995 and updated it to 2000 which has old school tools that were used.

I may have reviled my age in this thread but i wanted to tell some of you young hackers how shit was back in the day. ?

?www.the-hacking-community.iscool.net

Thanks for viewing my thread and Keep Hacking/Exploiting because it's not just a lifestyle it's a way of life! [img]http://freemileface.net/smiley/music/heavy-metal-044.gif[/img]

Hycca - August 23, 2012, 7:15 am

For some reason I think it's bullshit. You started hacking in early 90's? Honestly all your posts make you seem like a 12-16 years old child.

If you'd start it 90's you would have to be like ATLEAST 30 years old by now.

Actually he is 30-ish. :)

I know how him good.

We spent some time on Skype.

Can't really tell for the site if it's good as i am kind of suspicious of the java requirements :p

P.S that seems like a twelvie for you?

Exactly, this seems like a twelvie to me. Random defaces, overuse of emoticons, doesn't even seem to have any skill considering his '15 years of experience'.

Nice sense of humour for a 30 years old: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=2444544>

koewz - August 23, 2012, 9:02 am

15 years,what to say bro, congrats . It is nice to have someone with that much experience.

Cyber-Ghost - August 23, 2012, 9:38 am

thanks.

Eh, sometimes a touch of immaturity and random weirdness is what powers your morale. His "Random defaces" may be his way of acting (even if many will not take that path as such an advanced state of hacking). Maybe he is not a "Full on" hacker. I know many (Especially me :S) that are in it for around 2-4 years, yet do not know a lot. I haven't followed any tutorials and went my own way. Sometimes it feels better like that. But still, Guess you would have to talk to him somewhere to verify his true age!

BeggFoMercy - August 23, 2012, 9:53 am

Cool story bruh , Awesome hacking trip ;) xD mrbeard - August 23, 2012, 10:13 am i remember these programs...lol hmm guess i'm old....

ajent - August 23, 2012, 2:10 pm

Grats on your 15 year! I remember sub7 well. Screwed up my machine, after I figured it out I only used it to F with some friends =p

PI?yBoy - August 23, 2012, 3:06 pm

Javadriveby on the site? It starts in chrome with you want to start java?

realglynn04 - August 23, 2012, 3:42 pm

wow it's not easy to accomplished thnx for sharing your story mate. your awesome

razem - August 23, 2012, 4:09 pm

That's a pretty cool story, congratulations on 15 years.

mObile - August 23, 2012, 4:54 pm

Thanks for the positive comments guys <3 I've been out of the hacking scene for some time now, but I found Hack Forums a few years back and just started reading tutorials on website hacking because it was new to me and I couldn't believe how easy it was. I always get a rush when I can shell a site and root or symlink the server. To be in a place you should not be is what hacking is all about "to me" and to have Control of that sever makes it that much better ..hehe Hell Yeah man! Good to see I'm not the only "old school" member on this forum. ? ?

Website Hacking is what ive been learning over the past year and thanks to members like Hax0r and -Downfall tutorials I've manage to catch on with ease <3

Sorry I'm still kinda new to website hacking but I'm learning. <3

BTW ..I'm 30ish year old Rock Drummer from Detriot, I smoke pot, drink beer and like to get stoned and hack shit on my computer for fun..lol

I have a sense of humor because i've been stoned since high school bro ..haha No really, age is just a number I'm always gonna be a kid@heart. ?

Yes, I'm not a "Full on" hacker anymore, but I was for 6 years to the point of addiction. It took alot for me to just walk away because I needed that Outlet, some Control in my life because I had none.

Now I'm in a better place in my life and just do this as a hobby. ?

Yeah Sub7 was cool and had a ton of working features so I used it alot. What I'd do is make an Image Icon for the Server.exe and pose as some hot chick in my online profile with some pictures of a hot chick and ask them if they wanted to see naked pictures of me ..lol@worked everytime! I've Hacked into atleast 50 computers using Sub7 ..haha

Yeah sorry about all the popup's there not drivebys, it's just that the website is 17 years old and still online. tripod.com is a free website hosting site so there gonna throw there banners nshit in there ..lol

Eraldo Coil - August 23, 2012, 5:26 pm

Congrats man, I've been into hacking for about 3 years just really getting into it for about 1 year or so.

chris305 - August 23, 2012, 7:36 pm

That is awesome man, I remember when I first started hacking (I started really young lol).

Completely agreed. Why are people being so naive? If you ever went through his posts, more than half of them are deface related. You would probably figure someone who's been into the security field for over a decade would be cough PROBABLY cough up to something light years away from skiddie waste of time like defacing sites.

If you were legal or illegal with over a decade of experience you would probably be laughing at HF and most "hacker" communities as we speak. Primarily if you were illegal you would be up to at very least stuff like exploit development, and easily intermediate application security experience.

No disrespect towards anyone, but aren't you guys hackers? I mean, since when does the community get so fucking easily tricked/naive over arguements, lol.

P.S: Before you flame back because most of you are insanely butthurt:

tl;dr: I'm not saying OP is lying. All I'm pointing to is curiosity over actual security people being so naive.

P.S#2: Look at the wallpaper he posted, when exactly was the last time you saw an IP consisting "x.x.x.005"? While watching Die Hard 4?

Di?mond - August 23, 2012, 7:50 pm

Congrats on your 15 years of hacking. I know I couldn't do it.

hope to hear you will stay like this along time

Well said!!! and I thought you most probably would be a 17-20 years old teen who's pretty good. But I guess I was wrong.

How ever I find inspiration in this thread & I think for watching the security stuff evolving in front of you, it has really helped you guys from 90's to become awesome hackers.

I don't think that modern day kids like us can achieve that unless we get out selves into computer science or something like that. ?

jigarib - August 24, 2012, 11:30 am very long time congratulation brother have happy hacking

Thats alot man :D

Congratulation on that =)

Murder Mouse - August 26, 2012, 12:18 pm

I rarely post here, but had to pop in a quick respect for sticking to what's true to you. I started around '99 so I can relate to some of what you posted. Sub7 was still a thing. Netbios "hacking", unicode exploits, etc. Stopped a couple years after that to pursue phreaking after a conversation I had with a phone phreak. Something just felt more "real" about phreaking. Then of course a few years later voip took over and I found much of what I did put me right back where I started. Funny how shit runs full circle like that.

XuhaiD. - August 26, 2012, 6:52 pm

Congratulations bro really nice to see 90's hacker here

Salute to you SIR.

AnonRobot - January 31, 2014, 3:39 pm

thats soo awesome because i remember looking some suff up on google and your website came up and i always have used the tools on there even before i saw your thread i never knew it was yours

Crysan - January 31, 2014, 4:10 pm

If you look closely you can see it's an "Java-Driveby" in that way that it tries to use an exploit which worked on "his time" (90-2000 ?) which displays your technical informations on the page to scare the user somebit.

Wesker - February 1, 2014, 3:55 pm

I don't think you should of admitted being in a Hacking group.

Or having anything to do with Hacking.

You also named the group.

I know you were never involved in the silliness of Carding etc but, still.

No matter how much time goes by, It's Still risky.

On the other hand, I like your website style.

Good point.

However, The thread was within the first few pages.

So I responded.

As for the JDB, It's a GIF, a water effect of an Image.

The processes don't connect anywhere.

So if it is a backdoor, The host no longer exists.

brekete101 - June 20, 2015, 2:19 pm

Do you tutor on hacking? I would like to learn the basics. I am interested in learning how to hack emails, facebook etc. Could you also tutor me on how to spread spywares like RAT and others that could help me gain access to users emails and pw. My intention is to obtain these infos from as many ppl as possible. Say like 500,000 ebay or alibaba account users. Can anyone point me in the right directions?

Thanks.
