

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: deface a deface!?!?!?

lilrashad11 - August 28, 2012, 10:14 am

i defaced a website like idk when but. i posted it on here and someone DEFACED my deface like ?!?! (O_O)

How can i do that.? deface a deface roflroflrofl

Erudite - August 28, 2012, 10:16 am littleRashad.

This isn't a very well constructed post.

Maybe supplying a link would help?

PedroDJ - August 28, 2012, 10:17 am

If you have defaced and then not patched the vulnerability you have used, it obvious that someone else can do the same hack ;)

lilrashad11 - August 28, 2012, 10:19 am

(Aug 28, 2012 10:17 AM)brasolino Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If you have defaced and then not patched the vulnerability you have used, it obvious that someone else can do the same hack ;)but how did they do it to my deface page???

Buklau - August 28, 2012, 10:27 am

If the vulnerability wasn't on the page where you located your deface (most likely index) and you didn't fix it, it's still vulnerable. If you fixed it, there are probably more.

Antigen - August 28, 2012, 10:49 am

You can re-deface them with the same technique you used if it's not patched then it'll be called Deface a defaced deface page ? , and don't forget to patch the vulnerability like scramble Database to erase passwords.

Pioneer - August 28, 2012, 11:00 am

(Aug 28, 2012 10:19 AM)lilrashad11 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) but how did they do it to my deface page???
You didn't close the door you used to get in.

Did you delete the shell from the site?

They might have re-used it or the site owner didn't patch the vulnerability and they used the same vulnerability as you.

Cxmplex - August 28, 2012, 11:05 am

Haha that's too funny, I never heard of someone defacing your deface.

Arnette Rene - February 19, 2013, 10:47 am

lol my website got once defaced but i got his ip and booted the hell out of him XD

gon4eva - February 19, 2013, 10:48 am

If you used a really public and skiddy exploit then it's easy for someone using say for example the same google dork to come in and just do the same thing you did...