Logic is a group for those to discuss what one wishes.

Topics include philosophical, psychological, religious, political, metaphysical, scientific, intellectual, and logical.

We are a group dedicated to harbor none but the most intelligent members on HackForums.

A variety of things occur in our subforum. We offer a haven for those who wish to express their thoughts. With scientific articles, controversial discussions, and thrilling debates, only the most qualified are allowed into Logic.

This is simply a general information thread. If you have any questions, feel free to post them here.

Any questions, PM me, Call-Me-V or Phenomenal.

I have heard alot about this group, good luck running it Hex.

Impuhlsive - September 9, 2012, 7:15 pm

When will you'll be accepting applications?

iElement - September 9, 2012, 7:16 pm

Awesome group to make a goal to be apart of. The discussions, debates, and much more that go on are amazing. The knowledge I gain from such never cease to stop teaching me.

It's a great group. You did good Hex.

Froggy - September 9, 2012, 7:27 pm

Logic is an excellent group, I would recommend it to anyone who is interested in intellectual discussions. ?

FroStorm - September 9, 2012, 7:27 pm

SIM-1091100 - September 9, 2012, 7:41 pm

The discussions in this group are insane compared to the SRPP. Hope to see more of these in the HF public!

Toph - September 9, 2012, 7:43 pm

Looks like a nice group i would like to be in, heres a questions how many members a currently in Logic?

Puller - September 9, 2012, 7:45 pm

Not that I don't believe that this group has some of the most intelligent minds in HF, for the short time that I was in the group I enjoyed the discussions that went on in there. It's just that I feel that I got kicked out unfairly. I was a member for a few days after getting accepted via recruitment. Based on what Hex told me I got kicked due to inactivity but how much activity do you assume someone that just joined is going to give. I posted comments to the threads that interested me and was planning to make Logic a place where I could share my ideals with everyone there. I personally think you should give the new members that were kicked a second chance to get into the group without recruitment. Hope you decide to listen to my argument.

WarrioR™ - September 9, 2012, 7:53 pm

I love this group so much but this is my bad luck i ' m not a part in Logic.

I have applied one time for entry in that but that time my warning level was so high .

Hexicidal Pmed and said me try it another time when your warning level is low, so i m still waiting for another recruitment thread.

Great Group Ever :)

Good luck with this group I hope to be apart of it sometime.

You also need to touch up on grammar and debate. You only have six posts in SRPP and you haven't even been in the group yet you're saying it's a great group to try to increase your chances to get in. You're LQ tbh. Don't take that as flaming but rather criticism to help you in the future.

Great group, it needs improvement and members for activity. I can't wait to see some fresh new faces.

Im sure that Hexicidal is a great leader, and I know Phenomenal is a great member, although I have never seen CallMeV.

Anyways, with great leaders, comes great members which together create a great group. I cannot wait for recruitment.

@Phenomenal, Hi.

K?ala - September 10, 2012, 8:27 pm

I love being a member of Logic. A very intellectual group, I feel that I can discuss my thoughts freely with others.

Angel Beats! - September 10, 2012, 9:13 pm

Rhythm used to be my go-to-group. I thought it was the only group I'd be able to connect with. Well, that has changed. The Logic forum is my new favorite forum on HackForums. I love Music more than Debate, but Hexicidal really makes this group what it is, it is far more organized and of higher quality than any other group I've ever been in.

To anyone interested in intellectual discussion of any kind... The harsh recruitment is worth it. I got in through recruitment myself. Took me almost an hour to collect my thoughts, but I think I got the better end of the deal after being allowed to join. It's a truly inspiring group, and I sincerely encourage you to attempt the recruitment, even if it does take a good while.

Some tips on getting in:

1) Unique ideas and questions.

If this is anything like the other recruitment threads, you will have to ask yourself your own questions. Scroll through the thread, and it will become apparent as to which questions are common. The best way to set yourself apart from everyone else is to make sure both your questions and answers are unique, and haven't been used prior in the recruitment thread.

2) Size your responses appropriately.

By this, I don't mean a huge size font. If anything a huge font would make you less likely to get in. What I mean is, you want to make sure your responses aren't , but not too long either. Logic focuses on quality over quantity. Two to three paragraphs with 4-5 sentences each would be a good estimation on how much to write per question. If you write more, just make sure everything you write is specific and not vague. Logic would rather see 2 paragraphs of intriguing thought, then 5 paragraphs of meaningless prattle.

3) Write formally.

Double check your application, make sure there are no spelling/grammar mistakes. Avoid first-person pronouns, and look for substitutes whenever you feel you must use one (Try your best with this one... I broke that rule quite a bit, and I'm extremely lucky to get in even with my 50 million "you"s in my application). Even if your ideas are amazing, if you can't portray them well through your writing, they do you no good. Also make sure to add sources if you have any, and do NOT copy-paste your entire application.

Other good ideas would be to look through the other recruitment threads, and look at the accepted applications. Most of them are a good example for what is wanted to get in. Here was mine if you are interested:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=2752975&pid=25304071#pid25304071>

Hope this helps! This can apply to recruiting for other groups as well, but I wrote this little guide with Logic in mind! <3

Temper ? - September 11, 2012, 3:55 am

Dammit! I thought I could re-apply!

Eh, I'll be patient, my father gets his Internet back this week, which means no more being inactive for me, unless it is a holiday, which then I'd post in the inactivity thread.

Inactive over a period of time that I happened to check activity. I keep my method I check for inactivity a bit secretive because it's not hard to abuse.

I have a question:

What type of members does Logic look for?

Sophisticated > Dedicated? or Sophisticated < Dedicated?

This might be an obvious question due to the name of "Logic", but I would still like to know.

This might be an obvious question due to the name of "Logic", but I would still like to know. I won't speak on behalf of Hexi, but I will say that a large majority of Logic members are quite knowledgeable, mature, and bring research to the table. I believe that Logic is looking for both dedicated and 'sophisticated' (in context) members, and neither one could be favoured. You need a whole platter of qualities.
