

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Best Encrypter Currently?

jfk - September 12, 2012, 10:42 pm

Been out of the scene for awhile and I'm a little outdated. When I was active DarkEyE was the popular choice. I just recently checked into DarkEyE and they're only offering monthly subscriptions @ $40.. nty.

Looking for something without any dependencies and nice features (comparable to DarkEyE -- especially the persistence with uac disabled.. basically made it extremely hard to remove even with av's). Ideally, I want an encrypter that's reputable and reasonably priced too.

Suggestions?

iyolo - September 12, 2012, 11:58 pm

data protector

works priceless!

really worth it

jfk - September 15, 2012, 11:20 pm

(Sep 12, 2012 11:58 PM)iyolo Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) data protector

works priceless!

really worth it

I purchased this hours ago and was not informed that it wouldn't be able to run inside of a virtual machine. The owner was reluctant, but in the end refunded me, but only first telling me how I wasted everybody's time and money. Then he blocked me on msn.

Apparently, there are security issues with .net crypters running inside of a virtual machine. This is probably why I've always stuck with crypters coded in a native language.

Still need crypter ideas.