Thread: Simple UI Elements

Bad Meets Evil - October 17, 2012, 10:58 pm

First time doing anything related to UI. Constructive criticism so I can make something more unique next time.

Hopping on the bandwagon...

To many things are wrong, uneven, distored, or just don't even look good together.
Just going to recommend yu to read some tutorials and read up the basic fundamentals of user interface or user experience design.

Good luck.

tl;dr? Needs more detail and time put into them.

Yeah, this was my way of trying a few different types of elements to test things. Do you have any tips on fixing what you see as "wrong, uneven, and distorted"?

Not bad for a first try, try and make the background better as it is quite plain.

Honestly criticizing the background? You are missing the point of this thread.

it could just be an optical illusion, the arrow in the circular knob looks a little uneven, other than that i don't know what to say because i don't know what you are trying to make this for

I think it looks good, nice and simple, more of a cartoony feel to it, which I love. The only downside however is the knob part. This looks so plain compared to the rest of it, which all has a specific design.

The font isn't good and all the element don't have the "real" look in them. I mean they look so...boring...and no realistic stuff.

This should help you a lot: <http://psd.tutsplus.com/tutorials/interface-tutorials/amplifier-interface/>

Read and you will see that I am making it to practice designing UI. Also the arrow is perfectly centred to the knob.
