I don't really have problems understanding this, since I have the basic knowledge of metasploit, but maybe you should have some documentation on the pictures. Very nice guide though!

pashabiceps - October 26, 2012, 2:12 pm

Btw, i can't believe that some ub3r's and shit with high reputation don't know about metasploit or pentesting...

skids these days...

lulzcat - October 26, 2012, 7:23 pm

Simple method, Don't like using autopwn though. I try to use some recon and find out what browser the target uses and find a vuln for it. After the target has established a connection you can also use the persistence and multi handler to create a persistent backdoor so instead of them restarting their machine you losing access the backdoor will send a reverse_tcp connection every interval.

lilalexq22 - October 26, 2012, 11:06 pm

So what i want to know is. in step #4 Is that where my Victim's ip goes?

lulzcat - October 26, 2012, 11:14 pm

No, your IP goes there, You will be running a http server on your local machine that the target needs to connect too.

lilalexq22 - October 26, 2012, 11:33 pm

On the lest step it ALWAYS says "[-] Invalid session id" What do i do?

k1ngj0sh143 - October 26, 2012, 11:35 pm type sessions -l to list them look for the session ID that relates to your shell then sessions -i (ID)... This is simple stuff that can be found on the first page of google. Please use it and stop being lazy. IF for some reason you still cannot view / interact with the session then the payload didn't run correctly.

(Oct 26, 2012 11:35 PM)k1ngj0sh143 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Hacking over lan...boring unless you crack someones router I guess. Over the internet tho... yummy

Hacking over LAN is a good way to test your knowledge in a LAB environment and anything that is possible on the LAN is also possible externally.

Seems interesting.

metasploit is a framework for the linux environment.

In it there are many exploits vor proftpd, ssh etc.

It is updated daily so u will get fresh exploits >:D.

Just type in msfconsole in backtrack or download it for windows or linux right here:

<http://www.metasploit.com/download/> feel free to pm me with questions about it :)

best regards.

You don't need to know anything about metasploit to be ub3r? Please don't use that term "skid" when you clearly don't know the meaning of it

I can't believe that all these normal members think that just because someone is an Ub3r, then they automatically should be the following:

1) Know every part and kind of hacking.

- 2) Have a higher intelligence than the rest of the members.
- 3) Know all programming languages.

I've heard of Metasploit, I'm just not really into trying to discover exploits in things. It's not my cup of tea.

It is a client side attack. The target connects to the attacker (for some reason), and the attacker blindly throws a shitload of exploits over port 80 to the target browser.

Well technically it is hacking son, Just because those "skids" are not coding their own framework and exploits doesn't make it any less effective. Why so mad?

"Trying my best not to contribute to the forum" You know that sounded really LQ you know?

I want to learn about these exploits. I want to know how they work. So I come here. (I still don't understand what this tutorial is doing, I'll need a more in depth)

PM me the E-book plzz. ?

Sounds LQ because it is taken out of context. I also come here to learn and I do hand out information to people when I see it of worth. It's when people post a stupid thread because they cbf researching the most basic of topics.

Also the browser autopwn module is just setting up a webserver on your local machine and anyone who connects to you (The webserver) via the http port will get bombarded with any browser exploits contained within the metasploit framework that the client is vulnerable to. Just a summary fyi.

I figured that out just a couple of minutes ago... :/

But IDK where my webserver IP is... :/

I mean it's giving me many IP's but IDK which one is for which.

Typically in a LAN environment you setup the webserver on your 'Main' system and have a test system or VM as the target / client. So in this case your srvmhost ('Main' system) IP should be the one your using to post on these forums. Then from the target you would simply connect using the same IP or even netbios name through your browser as you would with any website but using an IPv4 instead :)

Let me know if you're still unsure and I will make a vid depicting the steps soon.

Anyhow can I send the URL to a friend on another network so I can look inside his computer?

I will make it tonight when i get home, And yes you can but it is more complicated and the payload maybe detected by any AV / Firewalls he has. I will get one of my mates to connect to mine and I will write up a tut on it for you within the next couple of days.

no, its not hacking at all. Its running a tool.

Hacking is using something in an innovative way in means other than which it was intended for.

This information, its not even accurate. Thats not hacking windows 7, its throwing every exploit on the books at browsers hoping one will give you a session. Itll never work, simple as that. Anyone whos updated wont have this problem.

hansp - October 29, 2012, 1:26 pm

"The word "hacking" has two definitions. The first definition refers to the hobby/profession of working with computers. The second definition refers to breaking into computer systems."

After the target has established a connection you can also use the persistence and multi handler to create a persistent backdoor so instead of them restarting their machine you losing access the backdoor will send a reverse_tcp connection every interval.

same as me, autopwn is not my cup of tea. if they're on my network i prefer to dns spoof and use set to create a jdb

Please PM me the fully detailed tutorial about this. I am just a starter in metasploit. :)

maikelnai - January 17, 2013, 6:13 am

mm,ONLY ONE IMPORTANT THING.

You have to put rthe SRVHOST too wich is the same as your LHOST , if not you will use the default 0.0.0.0 from port 80 and you won't be able to start the different servers.

Nigga From Africa - January 17, 2013, 6:15 am

PM me the ebook please ^^ /msgwayy...

maikelnai - January 17, 2013, 6:23 am

and i'm not able to use 80 as server port because it fails to create de servers ic3dh34rt - January 19, 2013, 4:44 am

Hey, can i have this? Thanks in advance!

WhiteHatMaster - January 19, 2013, 4:47 am would love this bro, please send me the guide, thanks happyhaxor - January 19, 2013, 6:51 am i think you need to change SRVHOST to IP address and not LHOST! Incase of WAN SRVHOST becomes External IP and LHOST will be 0.0.0.0 And in case of LAN SRVHOST-->LAN internal IP and LHOST to 0.0.0.0!

Luxus - January 19, 2013, 1:13 pm

I'd like to have this, if you could, thanks.

bug-me-not - January 21, 2013, 3:17 pm

I don't use metasploit because I was told it isn't as stable on windows. Is this true or false? Also was told it doesn't go as fast on windows.

Jemjem787 - January 21, 2013, 9:47 pm

Using a program to bypass the windows login would be easier, like Konboot.

Mindpower - January 21, 2013, 9:53 pm

hey bro i want these pdfs...

so please give me ..

thanks in advance..

Permanent - February 9, 2013, 9:20 am

You didn't mention what you were actually doing. This infact is the creation of a fake server, you didn't show the part where the victim clicks on the link and gets pwned.

soluicius - February 9, 2013, 10:14 am
