Thread: How To Create A Carbon Fibre Pattern For Photoshop.

Text - October 27, 2012, 10:01 pm

Hello HackForums! I am just posting this tutorial to show you how to make a Carbon Fibre pattern, & use it in Adobe Photoshop. Okay, lets begin!

Step One: Creating The Pattern.

Create a new canvas with the size of 4×4 pixels, zoomed it to the max so you can easily fill the colors and insert the colors exactly like the color table below.

The outcome of doing this will be the following.

Please note: This is what it will look like zoomed in all the way.

Step Two: Define As Pattern.

Next, we need to define it as a pattern. Click Edit -> Define Pattern & give it a pattern name, Carbon Fibre for instance. Click OK to save it as a pattern.

Step Three: Using The Pattern

To test the Carbon Fibre pattern, create a new canvas with bigger size, 500x400px would be good. Click on Edit -> Fill, choose the Carbon Fibre pattern created just now, click OK and fill the section up.

After you have done that, this is what the canvas should look like.

Conclusion

Well, that is my tutorial. Thank you for reading, & I hope this has helped. :)

You made this? because I swear I've seen this tutorial before. I followed it myself a few times.

Cool graphic nonetheless.

Thanks, this tutorial helped a lot. Photoshop CS5 didn't work at first but I got CS6 now so it's all good.
