Thread: [\[NO POST/PM\] VPNBook \[FREE VPN\] \[NO LOGS\] \[UNLIMITED BANDWIDTH\] \[AES-256 ENCRYPTION\]](#)

Hey everyone, today I'm going to tell you guys about VPNBook. It's an amazing VPN that doesn't require any registration, and it's also free! Here's a complete list of features-

Although this VPN is a little tricky to set up, I will guide you through the process.

- 1.) First off, lets download the open-source "OpenVPN client. You can pick that up at this link: <http://openvpn.net/index.php/download/community-downloads.html>
- 2.) Once it's downloaded, run it and install it on to your system.
- 3.) This is where it gets a bit tricky. You will need to download an OpenVPN certificate, which you can pick up here: <http://www.vpnbook.com/#pricing>
- 4.) Download any certificate you want, and navigate to C:\Program Files\OpenVPN\config
- 5.) Extract your certificate to the config folder
- 6.) Go find the OpenVPN GUI icon in your icon tray (located at the bottom right of your screen), and click "Connect".
- 7.) You will be prompted login credentials. Don't worry! They can be found at the same link that you downloaded your certificate from!
- 8.) Just login with the credentials at that link (in this case freeopenvpn:J8hfCiu6W), and you will be connected!

Thats all, I hope this guide will come in handy! If you have any questions feel free to ask below or PM me directly. Don't forget to post thanks!

Regards,
Peter

I was looking at this a bit back and wasn't sure what to do with the certificate, exactly. Thanks man.

That's exactly why I made the thread, I found it confusing at first as well ?

I was in need of a VPN, thanks so much for this tut. I will try it out when I get on my pc :)

Vouch, this worked. I downloaded the OpenVPN Certificate Port 25000 UDP. Does it make a difference to my internet speed?

Yes, it will make your internet slightly slower, but that is the same for all VPNs, even the paid ones ?

Thanks very much for the feedback, guys! I'm glad this came in handy.

I'm out! - January 26, 2013, 5:30 pm

Whiskey, thanks dude. Testing out the VPN as we speak. Too bad its only one country or is it?

Beside, thanks!
