Thread: [\[Source/VB.Net\] Photo Slider control - Slide through your pictures \[GDI\]](#)

Photo Slider

By Blink

About

Hey, it's been a while since I released something so I decided to finish this project and release it. I was inspired by steam's game slider (from full screen mode) so I made one myself in VB.Net cause I really enjoy messing around with GDI. :)

Preview

FeaturesDynamically calculates sizes

Mouse over effects

Optional outline

Click to focus

Arrow controls to switch pictures

Customizable sizes

Usage

Simply add the class PhotoSlider.vb to your project and compile, now the control will be in your toolbox. Drag the control on your form, make an ImageList and assign it to the property 'Images' of the PhotoSlider.

Credits

If you use this in any of your applications, please give me (Blink) credits for the Photo Slider, that's all I ask, just don't be a leecher.

Tedd - December 27, 2012, 12:12 pm

You should add animation for moving between the items, like iTunes does.

Other than that, it looks fantastic.

sh@rp - December 27, 2012, 12:22 pm

This is Awesome Blink, ... incredible job.

I do mine but it isn't as professional as yours.. because mine manage only 3 pictureBox and can't create dynamically pictures effects..

Thx for your share. ;)

Blink - December 27, 2012, 12:34 pm

Thanks everyone for the comments.

Other than that, it looks fantastic.I was thinking about that, but cause it has to move all those pictures, GDI will probably be too slow to make a smooth slide animation.

Ingenuity - December 27, 2012, 12:41 pm

Sexy! I like it! I may use this some time....

Onin42 - December 27, 2012, 12:43 pm

Really nice job !

I have done one but compared to that it's pure garbage!
Continue the great Job!

GDI is fast enough, I have a terrible computer & something similiar but animated. :)

Wasn't necessary to grave dig a thread that was almost a year old.

Since I made the effort to write this, I might as well contribute to the thread, knowing that it'll likely never be read by OP.

Very well done.

I was thinking that you could possibly add an opacity to the outer images. The outermost two images would be the most opaque, and the two closer ones would be less opaque. creating the illusion that the images are coming closer, not just moving from side to side. (Hope you understand what I mean, I feel like I explained that poorly)

Perhaps you could also add a shadow to create depth?

It's very simple to get the password. He did that in order to stop leechers/gravediggers like you from accessing it. No one on here will help you with this, so please stop bumping this old thread. I'll give you a hint though, since I'm so nice and forgiving. The first letter of the password is an i. Good luck!

Lexxi. - October 1, 2015, 2:24 pm

Nice tool, I might suggest that if you use a music player (for any reason) have the pictures displayed and the file name.image, and if that file is selected on the scroll it plays that music file, will be very useful on a music system, I might actually use it instead of a list box
