Seems good except one thing that i don't understand. The stub (loader) is coded in wich language ?

jessman420 - January 21, 2013, 9:27 am

If you want this to be successful, make it work like this. Buy credits, upload file, scan file, return file. If the file is fud, use a credit if not send it back for free. This way your customers only pay when your system is updated and working properly. You will be the master of your own destiny. If you want money spend the time to keep it fud, if you are having a bad week and have no time you will get no money. This will make disputes a non-issue.

I received the crypt that I purchased - My original binary appears to run fine, the file seems to be FUD (However, I cannot verify this until ElementScanner comes back online) and there doesn't seem to be any foreign files attached to my binary (however, I will investigate this further).

One point to mention is I don't believe this to be automatic, as my crypted file took a few hours to arrive.

Please do execution tests with a valuable antivirus. Scantime means absolutely nothing, I would like to know if it's method make the file run in memory without detection.

I performed an execution test with AVG (I only did it with AVG as I don't have the time nor energy to test with other AV's) and it appeared to execute fine, Scantime on the stub I used was 2/35.

Incorrect on both accounts i'm afraid, the stub I used was 102kb and it's not automatic - no crypter takes 4 hours to crypt a file.

I absolutely love the idea of this crypter and its easy to use interface, however, it is not FUD..

I hope this crypter gets better, I was thinking about purchasing lifetime.

Well, the crypts usually only take 1-10min, but it's been under-construction for a couple days now...
Could you give us an Est OP?

B4nk - March 2, 2013, 1:35 pm

MRJaxel - March 2, 2013, 5:28 pm

I bought credits, used one. Received the crypt within 12 hours, was not crypted and not FUD.

I won't refund as this dude clearly needs money, sketchy.

EDIT: looks like OP is banned.
