I used to have 500/500 fiber when I lived in the city.

Now I'm down to 24/1 because I live on the coast.

Not sure whether or not that's a good or a bad thing.

At least it's (somewhat) reliable.

Nice download speed, terrible upload, service crashes at least 10-15 times a day for 5-10 minutes at a time. Every time I call support they "restart my modem" to fix connectivity issues but it still happens.

We pay at least $60+, I've asked my dad to switch several times but the only other provider in the area of where I live is even worse.

I feel like majority of these 100+ speeds are by kids who forced their parents to pay more to enhance their Edick. Paying more for speed I won't use is useless considering what I pay seems to get the job done. Think my next investment is improve reliableity and invest in a router with mu-mimo.

College Hostel:

500Mb/s on college LAN (one of the best in any college in India), 30-40 Mb/s on college wifi (limited by the wifi router capabilities).

Cost : Can't say exactly, the tuition fee covers the internet costs :p

At home:

4Mbps (limited to 40GB usage) - costs 15$ a month (approximate conversion to dollars).
