Same question here.

And does the SJDB work if Java is disabled? Because firefox (chrome too I think) automatically disables Java if it's not updated...

Bruglione - March 7, 2013, 3:39 pm

So 70$ for SJDB

20$ regular JDB?

Highhighhigh

Wiz khalif? - March 7, 2013, 4:10 pm

Vouch for kohsti and foxy java works great =)

MessageOfTheDay - March 7, 2013, 6:22 pm

Why are people saying the price is high? I don't see it. Seems generous. Anyway...

With the regular version. Can you customize the java popup? Or does it say "unknown java" etc? Never used one before.

Also, Is connecting through a dynamic VPN allowed? Or is one not even needed?

Thanks :).

Same, i have tried multiple browsers, java versions, upload sites, crypted and non crypted servers and a test program(non server) written in vb. I'm only using redirects and not uploading it to my own host though.

No executes.

Foxyjava has a great rep! I'm thinking it might be some error on my part. But the setup seems so simple that i can't figure out what i could be doing wrong.

You're telling me that the file has to be 500k because you think the JDB stores your executable within itself ??

You clearly need to do more research.

I did, I was obviously mistaken. I had come to that conclusion because I couldn't figure out any other reason why it wasn't working. If I run the .exe manually on the computer, the rat loads fine and I can see it. If it runs with the user going to the webpage generated by FoxyJava and allowing the program to run, the rat doesn't load. I can't figure out why.

It does work and if someone has an updated version of Java, the traditional JDB will come into play.

I'd also love to note that if we're able to find a new exploit, we add it in free of charge.

Why would we drop the price for 3 exploits, 1 traditional, and a feature that allows you to mix them together, due to your inability to see the potential or due to the fact that you're cheap?

-No everything is on an online webpanel.

-Just click boom.

-Click clack boom dead.

-Depends on your .exe file you attached, if it doesn't have a mutex it would perhaps override the older version. Foxxy will simply execute it again.

RSGP will be around 4-5m.

The setup of the SJDB is quite easy. Make sure to read everything on the home page before you go to work with it.

Let me just give you an example of how stupid people can be and then blame it on the JDB.

- User uses mediafire for download link > blames it on FoxxxyJava

Yeah, xProtect would be the best option to use with FoxyJDB. It's totally free from dependencies it has great compatibility with it. What's most important it's simple, easy to use and efficient.

Got it. May be soliciting some support soon. I seem to be able to infect myself with a loopback pointed RAT when I disable security, crypted, executes fine and pops up. However when do the same with a normal server and start spreading, I'm getting 0 results. But I'm going to make 100% sure first, I want to have someone outside test it for me before I bother you guys about it.

The interface and system seems amazing, if I can get it to work. ?
Good work though, keep making great products.

Uh sorry for delaying so much on this, but I definitely Vouch for Kohsti himself, HQ person in general and I also bought FoxyJava a little while ago and it works great. The JDB's are fine, the SJDB's are also fine working on Java Version 7 Update 10 and below. Sadly the SJDB does not seem to work for Java Version 6 at all, I hope to see that fixed. Also, the JDB's sometimes.. Don't work? For me.. Like they work, then about two hours later or after a certain amount of tries from possibly people on Omegle I'm spreading too, it stops working like I test it. But recently it's been working great, but the silent has been buggy recently FOR ME. NOT SAYING IT'S BAD. It worked fine before I don't know WHY it's buggy now. Everything is there as promised, and I definitely would recommend this to anyone.

I just watched the video. So when someone clicks run, you'll get him as the slave. But how does that work? What are the things you can do with your "slave"?

What do you need to enter at "download link"? Do you need to enter a download link with your RAT or keylogger there? And then when someone runs this java, they get RAT'd or keyloggerd?

That is correct, you must supply a direct-link to your executable file (whether that be a RAT or keylogger).

A lot of people have Java enabled, especially in the gaming enviroment.

The SJDB doesn't work with a 100% infection rate, so it's not like you sent a link and boom infected. It depends on the Java system version.

Is the silent JDB worth the extra $$? And is it reliable? Good infection rate?

Silent's infection rate is at 5-7%. It bypasses the middle warning-security popup Silent JDBs are great for gathering installs when you send traffic.

Even though our silents only function with 7u10 and below, our mixed feature reads the visitor's current Java version and picks the best infection option.

If the visitor has the latest Java version, our traditional will step in and take over. Please feel free to private message me if you have anymore questions.

With the $20 package you get the traditional JDB.

If you pay for Pro, you get the SJDB option too.

Unfortunately, the dashboard currently only counts the stats of the traditional java drive-by and not the silent nor mixed.

We'll be updating the dashboard soon to count the stats of the silent and mixed.

We ask for your patience and support. Thank you.

It is safe to spread, although once your server has executed on the clients machine if they're smart enough they will be able to see out-going traffic and resolve your IP address. (This is considering you're not using a VPN, if you're you should be completely safe.)

Have you not read this?

"Before Purchasing or PMing me, read: Everything you need to know about Silent Java Driveby's":

Everything is explained there. It's people like you who expect the latest Java vulnerability for $70. Foxy has a 5% infection rate which is very high for $70 only.

There are exploit packs out there with 10% infection rate, worth around a couple thousand dollars.

Best method is to place your sjdb on a site that looks legit or backdoor a site with it and have the sites normal traffic flow through and run it, or you could always just buy traffic.

Stev - April 29, 2013, 6:52 am

Exactly like Bandors said. People need to create their own spreading method, if it's good you will obviously get more bots.

Website scan report generated by Foxy Software!

Before complaining on the sales thread, try contacting them about the issue you're having. I'm sure it's starting to get annoying, as it is annoying me and I'm not even staff.

Thank you very much for pointing this out. ?

It's like many of you expect these things to be fixed right than and there, as if you're the center of attention and no one else has a life or something.

I mean all I did was contact the developer, who is listed in the FoxyJava staff directory and informed him about the scanner issue, direct download link issue, and that the TJDB needed to be updated. He replied to me in about an hour informing me that everything has been fixed and to report back if I had anymore issues.

As you can see, the TJDB has been updated:

We're sorry about the recent downtime, we've been under a massive DDOS attack VIA a IRC botnet. Only thing effected was our generator, our hosting and dashboard were still online during the attack.

We have some funny pictures to show you, so that you can get an idea of how mad the individual is that is DDOSing our product::

Are you able to infect yourself with your crypted server (not your JDB link)?

(May 8, 2013 09:33 AM)PoisonKnife Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Are you able to infect yourself with your crypted server (not your JDB link)?

I tested the server on my laptop and others and it worked fine, I am using a non-dependent crypter.

How big is your crypted server?

The reason why I ask is because, if the person who enters your JDB site and clicks run or your SJDB site and leaves before the server is downloaded to their PC, they won't be infected.

Maybe that's the reason?

Oh yeah that might be the issue, thank you :) My sever is almost 2MB which is quite large considering the unencrypted server is 456kb.

If your crypter has the feature, then try to compres it.

Just make sure to test it on yourself before making a new JDB/SJDB (it's a waste of time to make a new JDB/SJDB if the server is corrupt :)).

If your crypter don't have the feature, try to compress the unencrypted server, before crypting it.

One last thing you could do (and the best thing to do) is to make your JDB/SJDB site so "interesting" so the persons you want to infect, don't want to close down the site :)

The (S)JDB is FUD, but it executes your given file. So if that's not crypted, it will be detected and removed. You upload our generated files to your hosting.

Make sure your direct download link is a real direct download link.

And if the system has Java, then yes. Make sure your executed file is also supported on Unix/Mac.

How large is your crypted server?

In order for you to infect someone, they needs to be on the page until the server is downloaded to the machine.

If they are closing the browser after 2 seconds, you'll never infect anyone.

So my advice is to make your landing page more interesting, so they'll stay for some more time.

This is not a RAT this is a Java Drive By.

A Java Drive-By is a Java Applet that is coded in Java and is put on a website. Once you click "Run" on the pop-up, it will download a program off the internet and run it.

So to infect someone you just have to send them the link to the JDBed website of you and that's it!

Kind Regards,

Syphox ?

How is that possible when the service is not even functional at the moment? I purchased it and am not able to use it. They say their host screwed up some things. But It's taken a while to fix and still isn't.

To the owners of foxy java I suggest getting on your hosts ass or switching. You are allowing them to hurt your business and I currently stand as a dissatisfied customer. It's non functional temporarily. You agree in the Terms of Service that the product may be disfunctional sometimes, im times like these where there's a problem.

There's nothing we can do about the problem, except switch hosting which we already did but it's not that easy to find a hosting for a product like this. I have been looking around for other hosting providers but there are not any which would be good for Foxy.

We have contacted the Hosting company multiple times and they are still working on it. So there's nothing you can do but just wait.

Edit: All problems have been fixed now. Everything is working fine again! Sorry for the trouble.

Seems odd to me. Doesn't the silent JDB fall back into traditional if the silent applet is patched on victim's system? So how exactly would the free host come in here? I would think that the costlier package(SJDB) would have more bonus features...just thinking out loud.

Yes that's how it works.

People get HOSTING when they purchase basic or pro package. But on the pro package you can only use hosting for the traditional applet. We can not host 1000 of silent Applets on our hosting, just think about that for a second.

I didn't ignore it, I just don't pay attention to posts which aren't true.

There's 1 domain because I've recently asked others for other domain suggestions and I am adding in more soon. There's no need to post that on here but just PM me.

And you can't clone big websites like that easily, you will have to do it manually. Now next time PM me instead of posting here.

For this JDB (or any JDB) will java request permission every time the web page is loaded?

If you could please read the last post on this thread:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=2760656&page=2&highlight=java+drive+by>

How he is describing the normal JDB sounds a lot like the "understanding Silent JDB" thread that was made. Does the regular JDB also require a specific Java version, or will it work 100% of the time. I hope you understand. Thanks

For the traditional Java Driveby, yes it will ask for permission.

For the Silent version not.

That depends on the browser sometimes. If an user has accepted the security box, it may not ask for it a second time.

(Jul 23, 2013 06:39 PM)skankfest2000 Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What Java does the silent work on? What are some of your execution rates people are still getting when using traffic?

It has the following exploits:

Silent (CVE-2012-4681)

Silent (CVE-2013-0422)

Silent (CVE-2011-3544)

Rate is about 5-7%, depending on the quality of your traffic

epicreviewsstudio - July 27, 2013, 3:11 am

Hello, I have a question. Normally when someone downloads a file using google chrome, Chrome notifies them that it is a suspicious file (although it is FUD). On top of that, if they have Windows Vista or later you get that screen "Are you sure you want to run this program etc." for all software, no matter the suspiciousness. So basically, I'm wondering, if you have a java drive-by and the person clicks "run", will any of this happen or will it all happen smoothly, the only thing the user has to click is "run"?

Which browser are you using and make sure that you inserted a direct download link on the builder site.

Tried both firefox and chrome. I also used the developer console to verify that the POST data was being sent.

I'm also using the direct download link for the file (private file hosting).

It just doesn't seem to want to clone. Does it work for you?

Nevermind. It's probably not good to test drive by applets with the newest Java version installed.

Yes, with FoxyJava you're able to choose from an array of domain names.

At the moment we are currently in the process of adding additional domain names to choose from.

It's regarding the encryption type of the Java Applet to maintain it longtime FUD.

And there are many differences, here's a few listed:

- Foxyjava has been up for more than 5 years
- We provide an advanced and high detailed statistics panel.
- Advanced web panel with many features (AV scanner, blacklister)

And much more for you to find out. Check www.foxysoftware.in for more info. ?

Traditional works with all versions (But they have to accept)
Silent really does work but ONLY with outdated java, with new java it pops up a box like traditional but even if you click run it doesnt work (He says it does, but it really doesnt. I have tried on different computer/windows/java/browsers and still wont run when i click accept on the newer java versions on the mixed jdb)

As for the dashboard, it also really does add +1 everytime you refresh the page. I refreshed the dashboard 20 times and had 20 views and executes, then i waited 30 minutes and refreshed once and had only 21, then refreshed 10 times again and it jumped to 31. That is the bug why he has 17 executes when he hasnt generated a JDB :)

Just wanted to notify everyone that we are in the process of preparing to release an array of new features and updates for all our customers. Here is a sneak preview into what is being released:

- Website Updates
- Silent Java Applet
- Quality Domains
- Uploading
- Execution
- Crawler
- Bypass
- Dashboard Tracker
- Platform Abilities
- Undetectable

We are most likely not going to be giving any additional information as to what these different features pertain to, as we would prefer to wait until they are all entirely finished and polished to perfection.

The Foxy Software team is always striving to deliver the most unique features, combined with undeniable reliability, these new additions to FoxyJava will most certainly not stray far from those concepts.

woneo - September 5, 2013, 4:10 pm

So stupid of me to request only $50 refund for the silent and asking to revert my account back to a non-silent one. Now i end with nothing for $20.

It was a kind REQUEST to revert my account to non-silent, you could have said no and kept it open instead of banning my account totally and keeping the extra $20 for yourself. Its not like i was being a total ass or anything and if you werent so developer-blind like many "good" coders you would see your silent one does not work properly as many people say not just me.

(I call it developer blind when i notice coders say something 100% works because they coded it and not because they tried it. Sometimes things dont work out as planned and you dont find out until you TRY it no matter how simple code is. I have seen it happen many times and usually when the coder eventually does try it they go "oh you are right it doesnt work")

Quote:The mixed and regular are combined.

When the mixed fails, the regular one kicks in. No it doesnt, please go ahead and try it yourself. When the silent fails it shows the regular one sure but no matter how many times you "accept" it does not correctly run. Im not trying to bitch its just a plain fact, so please acknowledge it as a fact or tell me why it doesnt work, when the normal one does work and no settings were changed. Which is the reason i requested a partial refund and an account change, there was no need to ban me because your product doesnt work properly.

limb3r - September 6, 2013, 12:24 am

^^im about to purchase the SJDB, but its absolutely essential that the traditional kick in(AND works!) if the silent fails. That's the whole point of all this, isn't it?

Six Below - September 6, 2013, 1:09 am

What's Out There - September 6, 2013, 1:48 am

Bought the Silent a while ago. I haven't gotten it to work yet, but I'm sure it does with the right version. And yeah it's true that the traditional that replaces the SJDB doesn't work correctly. I can run it a million times without getting an infection. I hope a new silent exploit will be in place soon and the replacement traditional JDB will work fine.

We will add a scan result of all Java applets after we have released the range of updates soon.
Please be patient and thank you =)

Have a question or concern regarding FoxyJava?

Feel free to PM me.

Stev - September 27, 2013, 5:30 am

We are working on the encryption of the new applet, it will take a bit longer than expected to release the new updates.

Stev - September 30, 2013, 7:16 am

As requested, one of the updates has been released earlier. A FUD update of the Java Applet.
Next updates are also coming up soon. (domains, new Applet and more)

You can configure everything yourself, whether you want to clone a website or just download the files and upload to your own website. Everything is possible with Foxy.

The silent applet works for real as explained on the thread made by dos3s. Some people just don't know how to use it and others expect a 100% silent version for the latest Java.

I am still working on a few crucial parts of this update, which took longer than expected. I am working currently on a new dynamic domain tracker and on the encryption of the new silent CVE applet.

I am sorry for the delay, but once these important updates are out you will appreciate it. I can also rush the updates and release them today, but I want everything to work 100% smoothly.

but i have one question do i need to crypt my virus.exe to make it fud?
The SJDB itself is FUD, but in order to maintain your bot you will need to make your own executed binary file FUD as well. Because it will be like this:
-Someone your website: no AV alerts appear, website is all clear.
-Foxy executes your .exe file
-Once that's executed and it's not FUD, this file will be picked up by AV.

For the traditional applet yes.
FoxyJava works on 7u21 and lower for the silent applet.

I kinda hate questions like these, where people ask "is it still working". Of course it's still working or else I wouldn't have it on sale here and have thousands of active customers.

So yes, it WORKS. ?

Hey just wondering you could answer a question of mine about foxy silent java drive by silent.

If I have the silent java drive by and a user clicks my link is he automatically infected without having to click yes to install anything?

and does the SJDB require the user to have outdated version of say google chrome firefox.

If I use the SJDB but the user has a java version over that which is susceptible to SJDB attacks, does the applet still appear? In other words does the SJDB redirect to a normal JDB in the case where their java version is above u7 21

What is the Silent Java Drive By?

Is it where you don't have to check the box before running the applet?

Or is it when you go to the site it infects the user automatically

If it says "your files could not be placed on our hosting" it's probably because you haven't entered a correct direct download link.

Just PM me if you have a question, you will not have to wait.

Other news: The buy page is temporarily offline (not the main FJ website). If you wish to purchase, feel free to PM me and I will process your transaction manually.

Autobuy will be back available soon.

This is for any Java Driveby. That's why you can make your landing page look more attractive by using our templates/domain or your own custom one.
