

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: Microsoft Offering Office 365 for Free to Students

Praveenkashyap - March 12, 2013, 1:42 am

[img]http://2.bp.blogspot.com/-bwnVWJaO4jI/UT7mIKjIF8I/AAAAAAAAAN0/AtP1CHw2QLM/s400/Microsoft+Offering+Office+365+for+Free+to+Students+hackersnewsbulletin.com.png[/img]

Microsoft is offering a great brand New Offer to Students to try Office 365 and its accompanying suite of products, including SkyDrive.

Microsoft will give a Trial to students of Six Months students withan .edu email address can sign up and get three months trial for free and then if he/she will share the offer via facebook then Microsoft will add more 3 Months in their account it totals 6 Months and Microsoft is also offering students 20GB of SkyDrive storage

Read Here

Nighthawk - March 12, 2013, 3:10 am

Thats pretty dam good, they should do a special like they did with windows

thegentlad22 - March 13, 2013, 2:18 pm

That's gay... I have an .edu e-mail but I am not going to try their shitty software out and then do their own marketing for them for an additional 3 month free added to your account.

Obi-Wan Cannabis - March 13, 2013, 3:22 pm

Time to shine with my new animations on my power point presentations!

TheLordOfEvil - March 13, 2013, 3:31 pm

What about students that don't have a .edu email address. ? Besides Office 365 was the worst product I have ever used. No amount of support from them was able to fix the constant crashes I had nearly every time I started up the program. When the programs did work half of the fonts were completely corrupted and just came up as squares, and if you somehow managed to get past all of that it would crash again if you tried to save anything.

Kenji Harima - March 13, 2013, 3:36 pm

Seems like getting accepted to college is already paying off. I'll have to download it, can't pass on free stuff.

thegentlad22 - March 13, 2013, 3:50 pm

(Mar 13, 2013 03:31 PM)TheLordOfEvil Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What about students that don't have a .edu email address. ? Besides Office 365 was the worst product I have ever used. No amount of support from them was able to fix the constant crashes I had nearly every time I started up the program. When the programs did work half of the fonts were completely corrupted and just came up as squares, and if you somehow managed to get past all of that it would crash again if you tried to save anything.

Your college should have it. Mine actually does and they have some portal to connect when you login to your colleges server they have an interface that is a portal to ms servers. It will allow you to download and install the software. It will use or record your student id instead of your .edu

That is what my university offers. However, this isn't something new they did the same with ms office 2013. They have a demo that I can try it out for 6 months.