I will list some of my ideas for update that I will be attempting to do lower down in the thread.

With all my products, any donations will be going to a charity!

I will be making it so that it is not dependent on any other sites soon, just finishing all of the other features in it, it's still clean and everything, your downloader is cool as well.

+ It might be dependent on another site but as long as it works and works well then it is still good. I've just tested yours out and looking at it, you download the music from youtube and convert it with ffmpeg? Seems slower than mine aswell, however both mine and yours is a good release.

Thanks for the comment though. ?

Video is in the next update that's coming up soon.

Edit: Quick updated last release to allow for the API change, next update is big and I haven't had much time to work on it that's why it's taking a while.

shebang - June 27, 2013, 8:19 pm

Does the video/audio converter use ffmpeg? Is downloading done through YouTube-MP3 still? Regardless, it's very professional-looking, while not containing too many flashy features. I like it.

Regardless, it's very professional-looking, while not containing too many flashy features. I like it. I refuse to use ffmpeg due to the fact that it's a big file size, it'll make the application dependant on the files being there. The YouTube-MP3 site is hardly down, but even then the API allows for the reading of there servers.

Anyway thanks for the good feedback.

Please give some credits for the Youtube Mp3 downloader, I'm sure another one has wroted that code/snippet.

Trollkarlen - June 28, 2013, 2:32 am

I think you find that they didn't. Don't be so judgemental, not all of us copy and paste.

Also you should be giving BIG credits to Youtube to mp3.org as well its their code that allows your app to run its main functionality.. Without it you would have nothing..

Nextrum - June 28, 2013, 9:12 am

It uses web clients and Web requests. The only browser is to grab the image and video player. The downloading is solely done through a web client.

True abut the youtube-mp3 but I would just used ffmpeg instead if worst came to the worst.
