Thread: 60,000USD | STARTING UP A GAMING CAFE/BITCOIN CLUSTER | UPDATED

m4dh4ck3r - March 17, 2013, 2:01 am

Right now I've got these ideas in mind

1.30 PC's :

1,100USD/PC - 33,000 I'll be building PC's good enough to Game and Mine some Bitcoins when I do not have customers or during nights. I do plan to stay open during nights when people want to have LAN Parties. I'll be getting a Steam Cafe account and some good Multiplayer games.

I'd like suggestions on the games and good cards that can mine bitcoin.

If you want to suggest a build please do it here :

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=3332635>

I'll be using Smartlaunch <http://www.smartlaunch.com/> on the PCs to manage the time .

2.10 Consoles: Haven't decided on whether to get PS3 or XBOX

I might have 5 PS3s and 5 XBOX 360, I'm still thinking of whether to invest in them. I might go into Wii to attract the Girls that come in .

3. Cafe/Lounge area with TV's streaming Live Matches happening in the Gaming Center itself or international tournaments that may be happening.

Staff :

3 Staff for Cafe

2 For General Support

1 For the Billing.

Charges :

Around 2$/ Hour for PC's and 3$ / Hour for Consoles.

Timings :

8AM - 11 PM during normal days Monday to Sunday.

Open during nights on LAN Parties.

I'll mostly be hiring friends so Staff won't be much of a problem

Suggestions, Ideas and Criticisms are welcome !

I would say, Opening a gaming cafe can only make you decent earning if you are into RPG games,. Like , World of Warcraft, Dota 1, Dota 2, LoL , and various others, Cause people are just addicted to RPG and a lot.

trust me in India there are many successful ones with opening a cyber cafe

Use deepfreeze, install literally everything and patch all necessary patches, deepfreeze all pcs so that no viruses worm keyloggers will stay on PC.

When reboot happens everything goes back to the state of first pc use (clean) in which you froze it in the first place.

I personally work in an internet cafe so I will probably be one of the most qualified people here to talk about an internet cafe

In the internet cafe I work at we use this program: <http://cafesuite.net/main> It is clean and easy to understand

For the computers you will have to think about these things:

1. Updates, on 30 computers It will take a long time to update them all
2. DeepFreezing your computers (to prevent viruses and stuff like that)
3. General wear and tear

Consoles:

Meh, not to much goes wrong with them

Equipment

You will need 30+ screens, keyboards, mouses, seats, benches.

Pricing, $2-3 an hour is really cheap, we charge $6 an hour but also offer vouchers that will get you longer time for a cheaper price e.g. $50 for 50 hours, $12 for 3 hours and so on

Power costs, I don't think that $2 an hour will cover your electricity bills

Bandwith, You won't fare well if you have 30 computers all going at the same time and only getting dial-up speeds

Dawge - March 17, 2013, 3:42 am

Employ sexy staff with big boobies! because it will be full of nerds you wanna do a convention once every 3 months with like a $10-15 entry!

3$per hour for one pc 20PCs(average) = 60$ atleast 10hours/day = 600$/day Minimum from PCs alone.When we have LAN parties and all night gaming its going to generate a bit income,I'll only be charging a flat fee per PC for night gaming.There will also be a Cafe and I might be investing in some merchandise too stuff like Gaming Mouse Pads,DVDs and things.

3.Yeah,I should be prepared for that.I'll be maintaining the keyboards.Mouse and Mouse pads I'll have to be changing them every 3 or 6months depending on the use.

4.Electricity is pretty cheap here.I've asked some people and I'm expecting around 1800-2,000USD/month.

Buy big RAM/CPU Gaming PC's and you should be aight.

Mr Kewl - March 17, 2013, 6:34 am

What will you do if the project fails? Have you thought about it?

Because the amount you're investing is too much. Start with a small cafe, then you can upgrade later, it's really risky mate, I know risks should be taken in business but not this big, I might be wrong though.

Frawshy - March 17, 2013, 6:41 am

Do NOT buy a ton of PCs at once. Buy about 2-3 of each console that you want to get, then release it. Because if everything fails, then you're out $60,000. Also, be sure to advertise well, and be sure to have a good website. I also suggest that you sell and buy video games, along with having some sort of snack and drink bar.

Now, after about 1-2 weeks of opening, if things go well, then upgrade. I personally would never go to one of these, I could just bring my Xbox over to my friend's house.

You need to think of the bad things that could happen too, as Mr Kewl said.

It doesn't look like you have enough money. Reduce your amount of PCs to 15-20 to begin with or you're quickly going to go bankrupt.

A general rule of thumb when starting a business is to acknowledge that it's not going to take off the first month, maybe not even the first few months. You need to have enough in your reserve to cover the lease of your property, utilities, and payroll for at least 6 months.

$60,000 is not nearly enough for these conditions.

Host game competitions. It will bring LOADS of people, and it will make sure they come back.

Things I think internet cafes should have/do:

- Make sure the food/drinks you are selling are cheap, it will make people come back.
- Also, if you buy parts and put together the computers yourself, that saves you around 40-50%, so I recommend doing that.
- Make sure there is good lighting thats not too bright or too dark.
- Good ventilation and air condition is a must.
- Give people who report bad activities free play hours
- Sell MONSTER ENERGY & coca cola
- Free coffee (also keeps people there)
- Comfortable chairs

Lucke - March 17, 2013, 2:18 pm

What about the extras? Ive been playin very much on internet cafes since my computer couldn't handle any games :/. Anyways if you haven't mentioned it you shoud have some coke/sprite etc (y know what im sayin) and in that way too. Bet you could gain some of that. chips and some candy. And they had it opened everyday all the time and only 2h pause. So for one night it did cost mayb 20 and 5 for one hour. Just sayn.

Kosmos - March 18, 2013, 4:43 pm

Good luck with starting a gaming cafe. You will need it. I used to work for a friend who bought and owned one for at least 3 years, it was called 'ChillZone', lame, I know. It slowly lost business over time. Be sure to update the store a lot and move things around every few weeks or months, because if people get bored of going there all the time, they won't go there at all.

As someone suggested before, adjust the times a bit. On the weekends, it should be at least 7 AM to 2 AM in the morning, especially if you hold contests. It'd draw in more people and possibly get you more money than you give out at the contests.

Again, good luck.

DDos - March 18, 2013, 5:02 pm

My honest opinion is not do it at all.. If you really have 60K, than there are a lot of different places that you could invest your money in rather than a gaming cafe.. Than again i dont know the market in where you are from, so maybe i am wrong. But gaming places dont make a lot of profit as far as i know, and with the prices that you will be charging and the expenses you have mentioned in the previous posts it would take years to get the primary investment back and even after that you maybe will see some profit.

But if you have already set your mind to it than you should really consider Sandshrew and Mr Kewl advice.. Never go "all in" into something that you are not 100% sure that it will be a success...

Also Spektrum pointed out some really "need to have" things and if you are really doing this than my advice would be that if you invest 60K into an Gaming Caffé than make sure to make a great

Image and Reputation for it, make it look amazing and something that no one has ever seen before, decorate the inside with some cool theme to keep the customers interested and get very well known in the city you are in, that in my opinion is the only thing that will keep you successful.

GL anyway. Keeps us updated.

CarrotMilk - March 18, 2013, 5:48 pm

60k USD for somewhere in India is definitely more than enough. Land, electricity and internet in India is super cheaper. Maybe not so much the latter, but definitely buying the place and paying for electricity.

There are some strict laws (depending on your state) about cafes, though. Like no porn and you have to ID EVERYONE that comes in and make sure they're over a certain age (usually 18) to access the internet from your set-up. And you need to keep records, too.

That's just from that I know having lived over there and been a frequent visiter to cyber cafes offering what you are.

Actually land is costly in India and so are shops. If you're going to buy a shop, it'll be a good investment OP.

The laws you are speaking about are mostly for usage of internet, yeah there is a no porn law. The 18 year old law isn't true. You just need a ID card, doesn't matter if driving or your school/college ID card.

That's my idea for a good internet/gaming cafe. The cafe I linked to is called Idojo, comes with computer, xbox, ps3, wii, and subway all in 1 place. It's only exclusive to Philippines, but from the times I've been there, it's fucking great. In the pic with the 2 girls on a couch, the blue light is coming from the TV, idk if either the xbox 360 or wii.

I suggest you get games like Counter Strike: Global something, and updated games that can be played world wide like Rpgs. Same goes for xbox, get the best games in the market.

If you invest all of your money, and it fails, you're stuck with PC's and consoles which you can sell, but wont make 60k back. You've paid for internet, paid for electricity, which is money you can't get back.

It seems the 7850 can mine at ~300Mhash/s .I'll be mining at 300*20 during nights when I don't have LAN parties that should be at 6000Mhash/s. Is that good ?

Sell Magic : The Gathering cards, junk like that there, if they can play that it will whore in a lot of customers / players.

Depending on the location, of course.

One would make more money by turning unused computers off than by mining atm. And hardware lifetime might end up being a problem if you are mining all the time.

Can anyone tell me how long it would take for me to mine with all the PCs running ?

IF I can generate 1BTC/2Days I should be able to payback for the current.It is pretty cheap here.

If i was you i would pre-pay the electric bill 3-4months in advanced (some energy companies let you do this), Anyways looks like an great idea just unsure of the demand... Have you looked into the areas demographics? that can certainly have an impact on your business.

Another idea which will generate lots of income is Private booths :) with computers/tv's, They have these all over Japan and are very popular!

Here's an example of how they look: http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ScOfA_y_Hmc

I knew a few running in Delhi that too in good malls, but they didn't made out too well...Mostly because they just invested so much at once. You might want to consider again to invest all money at once or split up the money for different stuff and make certain levels for each of them.

Arya Stark™ - March 24, 2013, 10:18 am

Some of my views:

1. Start with 15 Computers. Don't spend lot. Max install a 2.5 Ghz dual core with 2 gb ram and 320 gb hard disk and A nvidia geforce 9600gso. All games work smooth on them. I'm very serious. All of them, how do I know? I seem to own one and I have not seen a single game my pc isn't able to handle. The graphics are pretty good. I can play on medium on games like gta and high on other games(COD, FIFA).

2. Put the xboxes or ps3 in a glass box to save them. Get 5 of them both along with 2 wii's

3. Deepfreeze

4. Keep a huge amount of accessories (Keyboards, controllers etc), you will need them alot. Pc should be $2.5-$4. Increase as you success.

5. Never do anything in advance (Electricity. You might not be so successful, though I hope you will)

6. Bitcoining might low the pc's on specs. Only bitcoin when the pc's arent being used.

7. UPS

8. Set deals on huge packages

9. Start selling games in the shop. Trust me in my country people buy games for gaming zones.

10. Foods and Drinks. (Preferably setup a stall of a popular restaurant along with small snacks bar)

11. Comfort matters alot. Good chairs etc

12. Air conditioning

13. Keep it open till 3 am.

14. Make separate booths for clan matches (Only when you succeed and have alot of pc's)

15. Serious staff

I'm out.

Overhere in New York most energy providers give you an higher estimate per 6-12months etc and you pay that and then if you go over or under the estimated amount they will either reimburse you or send you another bill with the difference, I've done it many times simply because paying monthly for utilities is more expensive and really an hassle. ?

CarrotMilk - March 24, 2013, 12:24 pm

If you pay more/they reimburse you, how does that make it cheaper..?

Darkwin - March 25, 2013, 4:01 pm

They give you an higher appx quote estimating how much energy you'll be using, From there you pay 3, 6 or 12 months in advance and every couple of months they do an reading on the meters, If you spent less than you'd paid for you're reimbursed. Its cheaper because for commercial accounts they do better deals than residential and when you pay in advanced they offer you more perks and even higher discounts. ?

Dont listen to him, botting will first, wear your computer down. Second, you will get banned for botting in the game and will loose that $100 you spent on 10 memberships. Also you don't even make that much unless you understand the game.

It's Runescape, not fucking rocket science. Runescape will not wear down his computers at all. If you think that, you obviously have no experience in computer specs.

You don't need to buy 10 memberships, he can play just Runescape until he feels comfortable, then move onto 07.
