Thread: Poison Ivy - Connection attempt failure

SIM-1734772 - March 22, 2013, 11:48 am

Well, i tried to use Poison Ivy.

I asked my Internet provider to forward port 1604 to my IP (I can't do that by myself, because I can't access my router). He agreed and did it.

When i created server (just for testing) with localhost IP (127.0.0.1) and port 1604 it didn't work.

There are connection attempts like:

[2013-03-22 19:40:46] Connection attempt (my external IP)

But nothing shows up in Connection section.

I also tried to use no-ip service but I had the same result.

Anyone can help me?

No one is using Poison Ivy anymore. I wouldn't suggest using it anyways. Everybody is using Darkcomet, DLL Links for it can be found here: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=2632776>

It can still be configured to work, it's just that it isn't as popular and is outdated. Make sure that your port is being listened to and use canyousee.org to see if your port is open. Also, use Anubis to check if it's working. (Unencrypted servers ONLY Anubis distributes samples + Crypted ones do not work.

You have to use a patch to get it working on Windows 7, and even then it only works on x86 versions.

Poison Ivy is outdated, keep up to date with newer ones such as dc.

I don't suggest using Poison Ivy as it is old and no one really uses it. Use Darkcomet or cybergate preferably Darkcomet as it is more stable.

If you need help with anything else PM me about it.

Thanks. I am new on this forum. Unlike others this one is wonderful. Great community, people are helping instead of flaming. I'm glad that found it.

Well, many of You (I've read a few posts) recommended DarkComet and CyberGate so i tried both. CG is working perfectly. Thank you so much for help ?.

Sorry for my English (I'm having some problems with grammar ?).
