Hugocub.

When I click "start dstat" it doesn't show anything, so I'm assuming that means the server is down.

No, the servers did not go down. I will send you some credits for the inconvenience. There is a glitch that is being encountered by multiple users and Hardcore is working on a solution. I do see your history logs and you peaked at 89M.

HardCoreSmasher - March 26, 2013, 8:18 am

I believe this i issue is fixed, i have been testing it multiple times. Added new checks to the servers which are these

Code Hacker <---- requesting an dstat with different id's

No Credits <-- No credits

No Response<- Knocked Offline, or no return

Response Waiting*<- External Server didnt correctly write a dstat (new)

%Response%<- Your dstat

We've tested a lot of booters and none have completely brought our servers down. We will be upgrading soon to some 10gig servers though.

Xbox Live - March 29, 2013, 2:07 am

I think your dstat is high. It shows I am outputting bytes, but when I use my own server to Dstat I get way higher...

EDIT: Only the server that ends in .13 is broke.

HardCoreSmasher - March 29, 2013, 3:46 am

Just looked at the history i do see a spike so it is not broken. however, i believe some sort of filter was added by my provider, without my approval, removed server from rotation. Added a new server in its place, this one is stronger.

I reccredited your account to 200 credits

Cognitive - March 29, 2013, 9:06 am

I am going to officially end the sale at 1:00PM EST

HardCoreSmasher - March 30, 2013, 6:29 pm

Added new servers and a dedi, the prices have been lowered, and testing out this new servers bear with us. PM us with any concerns

Cognitive - March 31, 2013, 8:29 am

We've been having issues with our servers filtering attacks, if you believe this happens to you please notify me immediately. The problem doesn't seem to be happening with the new servers though.

Looking at the dstat's i dont see any freezing on any of the logs, if the server couldnt hadden it, it would say No Response.

Go to Profile>Overall>History ID to view the log.

And it wont display a 2000K hit, it will post it a in "M"s

HardCoreSmasher - April 9, 2013, 11:53 pm

I dont see any "frozen at 2000k", so how was your first one hit offline, and your posting one from 2013-03-25 08:04:46 this was before i had an instant response so basically it grabbed a dstat record as it was requesting it so it didnt come back as anything so my server thought it was offline, this was fix along time ago. As well as do you really think a ~350B will hit a server offline, espically if its just one second it said it was offline, common since that it wasnt actually offline.

a server and it cant handle the attack it will freeze till the attack stops and then it will give you a low output cause it couldnt handle it.

If the server couldn't handle your attack it would say "No Response" Stop trying to sales trash. The only time a scenario like this would happen is if the server was filtering the incoming packets, but trust me, looking at your logs that is not the case.

Okay let me do some explaining, so when the booter "freezes" on a vps it doesnt really "freeze" your connection just was lost because it got hit offline obivously and terminal doesnt send or recieve information.

However with d-stat.org, this is going user->host->server->host->user
Instead of user->server->user

This makes it so the host wont go offline and if it would to be hit offline the response wont come up, saying it is offline.

we have only saw 2 booter's that can fully take it offline, and it didnt "freeze" it actual does say "No Response"

Will release 1.2 lately with a huge redrawing of the website new gui

You are working with Vypor. Oh and tell him that he is wrong, he will know what i means.

Yes and i have the same thing called "proof" your working with him 2. I had a friend hacked skype.com i saw your logs from eachother convo.

Please post actual proof saying that was me would be great

HardCoreSmasher - April 27, 2013, 8:37 pm

i will be upgrading the design of the source soon, so enjoy
