Thread: [\[GOOGLE\] XSS \$1337 + HOF](#)

Wellwhatsgood? - April 11, 2013, 10:25 am

Hey everyone, just felt like creating another of the trillion XSS threads ;) Anyways, I found a basic xss vuln in Google.com/cars about 2 months ago, and received a wire payment of $1337 + got my name on the Google Hall of Fame list. This has been confirmed fixed by a Google security engineer.

Vulnerable Link; ?

Code `https://www.google.com/cars/#!search&Make_S=Acura">onerror=alert("XSS")//">&Zipcode_S=94501&User+Distance_D=25&start=0&tab=dealer&tknid=56875272`

If you look at the tab you can see that's where it was executed. Anyways just wanted to show a poc to people who might appreciate it, thanks. ?

Apple J4ck. - April 11, 2013, 12:20 pm

Great job buddy, congratz about the money. :)

I have XSS in google as well, I'm still considering reporting it to them because it can only be done with $_POST data so I'm not sure how much or if they will pay me.

They might do deposit to paypal, you simply enroll to Google as a business supplier than they wire it to your bank account :)

Aww dude that sucks, I remember when I was waiting for a reply that was the one thing I was terrified if someone submitted it slightly before me :p

:) Thanks man appreciate the feedback! They set the link as nofollow too so it won't the site in google's results :P But still, If I was running a forum and had that as backlink, that would be perfect!

TechApp - April 12, 2013, 2:39 pm

So where is the proof you did this? I looked at the Google Hall of Fame and there are a lot on there... Anybody could have gotten the vulnerable link and posted it on HF with an image saying they did it. If there's one rule with members on HF: No proof means it did not happen. A picture does not really count a proof in this situation as I could have taken a picture like that.

Bump. Just XSS'd them as well. What's the deal with having to be a Google Supplier? Did you fill all that shit out or what? Because I don't have a business number. How am I supposed to claim the reward?
