Hackers Introduction

Now a days a lot of people want to be hackers. It is a good thing to have some extra stuffs in our knowledge bank. So lets start with the basics of hacking, by understanding the different types of hackers. There are mainly 3 types of hackers:

Black Hat Hackers

This category of hackers is also known as "crackers". Hackers in this category are always tempted to gain privileges of someone(s) system without the authorization or permission. Usually these peoples works individually for their own gains/fun. But as a team they can be deadly and their impact can cause trouble to a greater extent. Their activity mainly includes DDOS attacks to websites, Site Defacing, Identity Theft, Vandalism etc. You will be lectured in detail about these terms in the following tutorials.

White Hat Hackers

In contradiction to Black hat hackers, White hat hackers are life-saving angels to many. They are also designated as "Ethical Hackers". In fact, Ethical Hacking is a career in today's word for many. To be an approved WHH, you need to be certified. But who cares about a certification, when we know what we are talking about and when we have a good and helping mind. To be more specific about their do's, they perform security tests on different systems with the authority's authorization which would be definitely illegal when the hands of a BHH gets involved. When compared to BHH, WHH are small in count, but they are still powerful.

Grey Hat Hackers

As you can probably imagine, these are those categories of hackers who hacks for both good and bad. They usually do Black hatting for their malicious intentions and do White hatting with good intentions. In short, they help and harm. The majority of the people fall in this category. So they are typical hackers and still a potential threat!

Which One Should I Become?

If you are asking me, it will be a definite WHH. But you don't have to listen to me. What I want to tell you is, it will be always better to know what you are getting into. Hackers are sometimes getting caught, and when they are caught, they will be charged and sometimes may be sent to jail for some short period of time if you are not a certified WHH. If you are asking me, I suggest you to keep learning until you gain some good knowledge in the matter and know how to remove all the traces of your hack. There can be different potential traces (like logs of the system you have hacked, your information's that got captured by the hacked system etc) that can lead an expert to pin point the hand cuffs to your hands. The different methods to remove the traces of the hacks will be lectured in the following tutorials I plan to post.

Other types of Hackers

"Dude just wait a sec! I thought you were saying there are only 3 types of hackers in the world!"

Well and of-course, there are only 3 types of hackers. But there are some different subcategories for these types. Just like some Ranks by which we can categorize.

Elite Hacker - A grade rank meant to describe the the most skilled/ reputed hackers. They knew/ discover the hacking methods that are still unknown and that are not been fixed.

Script Kiddie - A lower rank than the above one that designates someone that uses tools made by others to do some stuff and they don't even know a shit about the real hacking.

Neophyte - A much lower rank that describes a person that is a newbie to this matter and is having a little a knowledge about this matter.

Hactivist - As the name rhymes to "Terrorist", they are the people who hacks to inject some religious, political anarchy.

Green Hat Hackers- As the name indicates, they love green. They hack only for money. They will not think about the cause. They just want the money from their slaves.

Now just start reading a few tutorials a day, and learn all you can. Eventually it will stick in your head with practice. Then, you'll be ub3r L33t.

darksrc - April 28, 2013, 4:39 am

I'm pretty sure everyone on HF knows the different 'hats'. I personally think classing yourself under a specific title is stupid, but if I had to go with one I'd pick somewhere between white and grey hat

SHADOW REALM - April 28, 2013, 4:39 am

I do spose I could say a L33t Hacker???

Ever thought of anger management?
Never mind, I like your way better. ;D

Simmdon - April 28, 2013, 4:51 am

Well, I don't hack for no reason.. I only hack man and deface sites to get P's in.

Guess that makes me a Black/Grey hat. ?

Th3PonyWizard - April 28, 2013, 6:50 am

I despise the term "Hacker" and look down upon anyone who is using it to describe themselves.

Mr. Tycoon - April 28, 2013, 6:52 am

I believe I'ma fucking pro hacker. But the problem is that's not included in the list ;)

????A?? - April 28, 2013, 6:56 am

I would say I am a grey hat, over a black or white.

I'm probably in the middle of Gray and Black hat.

DiamondHacking - April 28, 2013, 7:24 am

I'm a white hatter here. ;D

Making money the good ol' fashion legal way.

In classifying and regarding yourself as one type of hacker, one limits themselves in the fields that they can go down. Although from time to time I engage in legitimate blackhat activity, I also aid others removing infections. As well as that, I consider myself to be an elite social engineer, and occasionally a green hat. What am I then? A rainbow hat? No, classifying yourself induces more negatives than it does positives.

I agree. A great hacker is a mix of everything. This is just a thread to show the newbies what's out there.

Grab - April 28, 2013, 7:47 am

I'm a grey hat, if somebody violates me; I'm probably going to try and do harm to their site, but if its a random site and it has an exploit I'd just report it to the owner to patch it up.

Hope to see many white hats here.

TheGrayAviator - May 19, 2013, 4:04 am

I like to call myself a Greyhat, because it makes me think twice about my actions before executing them.

Z0mbie. - May 19, 2013, 4:56 am

I'd prefer myself to be classified as a Greyhat as I do both whitehat and blackhat activities.

It's about moral, ethics, not skill limitation. Your actions are always driven by your personality and motives, this also applies on hacking. There's nothing bad about limitation: Knowing your limits is the first step at defining yourself. The man is limitless, true, but that's only after he breaks his already-known limits, and goes farther. But then again, are those limits we are interested in crossing?

I strive to be WH because morals, it helps me sleep at night.

But then again: Life is full of people not being who they claim to be. Security managers, SysAdmins, Networking managers and generally lots of people from the IT industry are only there because of favoritism and not skill. You can see it the most on tech stores; everything is bullshit.

PoisonKnife - May 19, 2013, 5:28 am

I have better things to do and I don't consider myself a Skid at all! But you are right 99.99% of the members in this forum are skids.

But the 1% remaining are the true hackers.

I wouldn't quite say that a Hactivist is quite that. IMO, you are making the term sound quite negative. You could consider Anonymous, and the Syrian Electronic Army as both Hackivist groups, but the Syrian Electronic army doesn't promote anarchy at all while Anonymous does. I consider a Hactivist to be a person that hacks for a purpose, sort of like a digital activist, not terrorist. That's just my opinion, take it as you will.

Limiting yourself under a little colored box (Or a hat, in this case) telling you what to do and how to behave is ironical; Hackers are breaking rules and bypassing them, but their biggest backlash is their own ruleset. :)

Don't define what you can do, what are your limits, and how far you can go with a price tag, a hat, or any form of a nickname. Everybody here is over his own little path. Some paths are leading to a toxic waste, and some to heaven. Ya can always switch though.

Rinqt - June 26, 2014, 3:06 am

Agree with pony, labels are for high school kids. and io don't care if you are 13 or 30 online you are ageless the only thing you are is your ability and labeling your ability is idiotic and limiting.

If I'm in a bad mood, I'll exploit it and then just do whatever, probably try to get a laugh out of it.

I help my friends with viruses and stuff, so white hat.
And then Black hat stuff that won't be mentioned here.

I don't want to or will i ever, use hacking to steal anybody's credit card details/bank account money or anything like that, even if my keylogger managed to get that information i would still never use it and delete the file. but the main motive for me is information, Intel and espionage on my enemies/peers/those in social circle or who i work with so i can know what they are up to and be omniscient.

Like someone on this forum said, Knowledge is power, and i use hacking tools to be at least 4 steps ahead of everybody else, What class does that make me?
