

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: [Do i need malwarebytes to remove malware? \[SOLVED \]](#)

?clipse™ - May 5, 2013, 12:16 am

Can i use Antivirus to remove malware or do i need Malwarebytes for that?

I am using Bitdefender Total Security.
Also, do i need any other special antiviruses to protect my computer?

Whenever i use chrome nothing loads after 10 seconds and my whole computer freezes.. ideas?
I think it's because parts of the files for Chrome got corrupted when my PC shut down unexpectedly so I think i'd need to uninstall it.

Thanks.

Note: Solved guys. I re installed my chrome and it worked.
It was corrupt which caused my pc to freeze.

Thanks for the helpful answers ill try malwarebytes!.

Shekhar - May 5, 2013, 12:23 am

You can try scanning with MalwareBytes. Its is surely powerful for threats.

Corso - May 5, 2013, 5:38 am

I use BitDefender as well (right now at least, testing it out)... I'd recommend you have Malwarebytes installed and just use the free version as a secondary scanner. Think of it this way, if something DID slip by your AntiVirus then it's nice to have something like MWB to be a secondary defense/scanning agent to verify your systems clean.

Now for the chrome! Run these programs to see if they will help clean up your chrome for any injections or poor quality/adware softwares...

Junkware Removal Tool \(JRT\)

AdwCleaner (Click on Delete button when program loads)

Please update the post/thread if you have any further issues, questions or if this has been resolved.
Thank you.

phybe? - May 5, 2013, 7:08 am

I would definitely recommend having Malwarebytes alongside an anti-virus.

LulzProdigy - May 5, 2013, 6:53 pm

I have Avast AV running on my computer, however, I have a copy of MalwareBytes on my computer just in case it's needed. I mainly use Avast for real-time because of the shields it has. If I want to scan, I use Malwarebytes.

Nyonic - May 6, 2013, 1:48 pm

(May 5, 2013 06:53 PM)LulzProdigy Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) I have Avast AV running on my computer, however, I have a copy of MalwareBytes on my computer just in case it's needed. I mainly use Avast for real-time because of the shields it has. If I want to scan, I use Malwarebytes.

This is what I do. Malwarebytes is a very good scanner but when not using it I use Avast.