What's a better option for me. I have a budget of £350~, and have choosen two computers.

Computer one:

Computer two:

Computer one would come to a total of around £380 including the OS.

Whereas computer two would be £350, but does the parts suffice for the extra £30 being spent?

Don't but the OS, you can rip a DVD with a perfect working windows 7, I would go for the first since the second link does not work ;p

Apologies. Updated the OP boss. Care to evaluate. Any ideas on where to rip windows from?
