Thread: What makes you a hacker?

Host144 - June 13, 2013, 12:16 am

I've seen a lot of people claiming to be a hacker, some get called a hacker for using cheats in a game (DL and inject).

What makes a hacker?

Nuk3 - June 13, 2013, 12:17 am

A hacker is a person who breaks into a database of sort and steals account/causes grief.

People who inject shit into their games and cheat are called cheaters.

Personally myself, I'm no hacker, I just like to have fun. But in all honesty I would say a hacker doesn't define themselves as what the modern day would define as a hacker, they do what they do because they need and/or want something for reason, not for shits and gigs or to dominate over others.

Thing like thatNo. The meaning of being a hacker goes deeper to than just games. A real hacker wouldn't call himself a hacker but those who do a chump. For example, Anonymous, they call themselves Hacktivists yes but they strive for change and human rights. They don't waste their time on games because they have bigger fish to fry.

Well by deffinition a hacker is a grey hat term meaning both good and bad come out of them versus a cracker whos sole purpose is to please only there needs by destroying manipulating and stealing.

My Anonymous mask. You feels the funny part?

Me neither.

DrDinosaur - June 13, 2013, 2:51 am

The definition of a hacker is so different among people.

The term 'hacker' became unclear nowadays. In my opinion, creativity makes the difference.

There's no exact meaning of it anylonger since a kid with a stresser call themself a hacker too.
Would say "hacking" is being able to get into networks and retrieve the info you need by breaking through diffrent defence systems.

Cha0 - June 13, 2013, 3:29 am

You're a hacker when you do things with software and/or hardware that the creator did not intent you to do.

That's what it means, nothing more, nothing less.

Being a "hacker" isn't a profession, if you went on Habbo and stole some people's accounts, then you'd be classed as a "hacker".
