How to find a Facebook Profile from a Picture on Facebook

Often times, you're working on dox'ing someone, and you hit a dead end. This will help you find a Facebook profile from just a Facebook picture's URL.

Prerequisitesable to right click an image and view it directly or...have the file saved, with a name like "535035_437599272997897_2093328748_a.png"

Guidetake a look at the Facebook URL from the image you've got (Facebook even keeps the ID in the name when you save-as a picture to your PC):

Code

`https://fbcdn-profile-a.akamaihd.net/hprofile-ak-ash3/c0.6.180.180/s160x160/535035_437599272997897_2093328748_a.png`The important part of the URL is the last chunk of numbers near the end of it:

Usually, the center group of numbers (called a Facebook ID, or FBID for short) is the ID of the Facebook we're looking for.

Take that ID, and add it after Facebook's URL, like below: (in my example, I used the ID from the URL above)

This takes us to that user's Facebook profile and/or the photo album that photo came from.

Notesyou can also try the two other groups of numbers in the original URL as well, to see if you get a profile

Scooby Doo. - July 8, 2013, 10:40 am

I knew about this, but thanks for the share though.

Killcam - July 8, 2013, 10:41 am

Nice tut, I've known this for a while.

I used to do something similar back when MySpace was still alive lol. ;)

Thanks, I was able to use this to find somebody. :)

piffkush - August 5, 2013, 10:54 am i dont get it, you already know where the profile is coming from, because your right clicking it and getting it from that profile

the URL is from that profile its going to bring u back to the same profile u got it from
