Thread: Whats a way of sending 4-5gb Files to PC anonymously?

iTraffikZ - July 23, 2013, 2:53 pm

Ok so couldnt really find the place to put this thread so sorry if its in the wrong section...

So basically i am sending MP4, AVI files to people and the way i doing it at the moment seems probably easy to track, Its not necessary the people im sending to im worried about, Its the legal suits what deal with copyright investigations... So if anyone could share there ways would be very helpful.

Thanks in advance

Torrenting? Just use a VPN and you should be fine...

Put onto USB and send it in the post? USB's aren't expensive nor is post.

Why are you doing this, OP? Trying to get someone in trouble?

iTraffikZ - July 23, 2013, 3:10 pm

Basically im selling files for bitcoins and it needs to be directly to there PC no addresses or anything like that, I cant use email because that isnt anonymous at and all the email ip finders what are about its seems silly to do it that way.

If your sending the file, there is no directly anonymous method that I have heard of.

well you can open up ports but, if there isn't a program listening on that port then of course it would say its closed

Buy a vps with fake information using vpn, upload the files and give him the download.

i think tor chat has a file transfer functionality but i doubt it can handle large files

Encrypt the files strongly so that it couldn't be identified, then upload it to mediafire, or whatever hosting where you could remove after he downloads. After he downloads give him a key to decrypt via other method, like email, etc, since they won't know what the key is for, so its all good.
