Found a bug.

When exporting the image toolbox shows up, and you cant move the toolbox.

Move the toolbox by holding the right mouse button, and dragging it to where you want it ?

Edit: Just noticed the drawing, not saying I like it because it's a cock, but it is detailed.

I fail at drawing lines and like none-wonky curves, AKA: C etc.

Oh & thanks.

You should probably do it so you can toggle toolbox in options, and so it doesn't show it when you export it.

so 1 = hide toolbox

2 = show toolbox.

1 doesn't toggle it it just hides it. if that's a bug :?

Should add a .ico editor :D

Something that you can edit them by just selecting a .exe and it will pull the image from it. Never seen that before but that would be pretty cool.

Don't some things have more than 1 .ico though?

So would it pull all or the first?

Also, you should allow modification of the picture size (like MSPaint) and allow you to make the window bigger.

And you should add tabs aswell, so you can edit multiple things at once.

And with the .ico puller, it could open them each in a different tab.

Good luck with the program.

Good luck with the program.If you mean resize the picture, you cant do that by dragging the little arrow at the bottom of the picture, or going to the File tab, Resize Image. I am working on layers which is somewhat like tabs, I know exactly what you mean and it is a great idea, I will look into that for the next version after V3.0. Thank you for the feedback.

Custom themes would be great,
kinda like DC RAT's theme selector,
but make a template for it so people can use your program to make it.
lol.

edit:
you should release the first source for it..
like when it was only a paint tool,

lol

This isn't bad although I personally couldn't see a difference between this and other paint editing softwares out there. Sure it has gradient tool but that isn't a big deal. Good job on this nonetheless :) I'm sure it took a lot of work

There is more features then Microsoft Paint.

I will be adding more shapes like Microsoft paint has (ex. arrow, speech bubble, etc..). I am also working on a flood fill, layers, unlimited size canvas, and paths.

It looks like mspaint in stage 1.

But I do like the idea, have to say you're the only person I've seen to make another program like ps by themselves

But I do like the idea, have to say you're the only person I've seen to make another program like ps by themselvesIf you have Photoshop, I guarantee that you are using an illegal cracked version. This program doesn't cost money and is for beginners to learn basic graphic designing. The program Photoshop is for more professional graphic work, that is why it cost so much. I hope that answers your question. ?

It did look exactly like Microsoft Paint 98 when I first started to create it before the summer had started, it was just an experiment I had tried with coding and is such a fun project to be working with. I'm glad I had made HFPaint the way it is, I will continue to make it better as much as possible, although I am busy with school, sports, and projects. As you can see the program had been through many changes and has improved a lot since the very first version.

Ain't Illegal if you haven't been caught.
In other news:

I like this program & I thank you for working hard on it but I still rather use my illegal cracked version of Photoshop instead, a lot more option there. ?

Thank you for the feedback, of course others with more experience with graphics will use top of the line programs like Photoshop. But HFPaint is free and for beginners, it is rather a simple program to do basic graphics with more features then Microsoft Paint.

Of course Photoshop is bigger and it also cost money, my program is free. I am not sure why you would tell me I shouldn't attempt it, I like to experiment with code and I decided to create a paint application. I am sure if you created a paint program you would want to share it with others too. I wonder why I named it HFPaint, and only released it to members of this forum. You can also mention about all the other members that decide to create hacking forums just like HF and booters just like everyone else. They still do it because they want too.
