Thread: YouTube video got flagged - first time, account disabled?

ZSGamer - September 11, 2013, 8:18 am

Well, I had a specific niche (a little saturated). My video got flagged, and whenever I try to login to YouTube, it says my access to this service has been removed.

Why? It was only one video, did not contain any sexual content or anything? It was just text to my website.

Why did this happen? Will my account get unbanned? I had around 8 different video's, but one got flagged and now my whole account's banned? -_-.

Hope someone can clear this up for me.

Your whole account was banned, there's nothing you can do - sorry.

Don't have that many videos onto one account ^^

I guess you learned that the hard way.

Get back on the horse, make new accounts and start over.

But i've had some of my video's removed before (on other accounts). The most that happened was that only THAT video got deleted.

I don't really understand why they'd ban my whole account? A little strange.

It was probably elder scrolls online right?

No. Nothing related to games/hacks/keygens.

Always, use one account per video, and use an high anonymous while changing accounts.

And also boost your videos, with a balance in the views, likes, comments ... Etc

Shit happens bro...just make another niche and go on. Don't give up. And make sure you don't boost your video too fast, wait 7 days before adding a bunch of views

ZSGamer - September 11, 2013, 3:18 pm

Ah, was that the problem? I'll try leaving it a while before boosting it again. Will upload it again now and wait a week or so before boosting.

Thanks for the responses.

You're welcome.

You can add some views after 2 days, then try to add a little bit more in the following days. Just make it to look "believable". After 7 days it'll be safer to add let's say over 1000-5000 views :>

Just think a little bit. Wouldn't it be suspicious if you add 5.000 views in the second day? (or even 1000)
