Dispute thread: <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=3760425>

Recently, I purchased this individual's product, Data Protector v2, and I sent him a private message in regards to his notification after purchasing (.NET Seal Serial Code). An hour later, this scumbag disables my account, and partially refunds me on PayPal. He claims that I have multiple accounts, stated that I am low-quality, and basically ridicules me.

He had the audacity to -3 REP. me for no absolute reason, even though he literally stole $3.00 USD from me.

I do not care about the amount, but what aggravates me is his unprofessional attitude, rudeness, and unrighteous actions.

I simply created this topic to warn everyone (potential, and ongoing subscribers) to not deal with this individual.

I wouldn't be surprised if he's partially refunding people to earn a dollar or more from potential "untrustworthy members."

Reputation ratings can be deceiving.

EDIT:- blahdyblahdyblah, I don't have an opinion on this since last time I commented I got about 5 PMs from the guy and I'm not in the mood for that again.

Biased idiot.

First and foremost, I have never dealt with this user in the past, prior to purchasing his product, which he reversed the payment, and only PARTIALLY refunded me.

Then he had the audacity to ridicule me.

You can suck on his left nut, because it appears to me you're figuratively clinging on it.

It's known around the forum that you should never ask him anything about the crypter that you could have figured out yourself. Because if you do he will just neg rep you and disable your license. Seems this time it was something else though.

He claims that I am another individual, blatantly lied that there was a .NET Seal fee of $3.00 USD, and revoked my license, because I used the username, "Pseudonymous" as my .NET Seal account, which he thinks correlates with another user that scammed him in the past.

Pathetic..

No$ never suspends/bans a license for no reason or just because he doesn't like you.

When he does this, he always has a legitimate reason. If he doesn't feel like explaining, then that's his choice.

He's not a fraud, he has been running his crypter for years now.

If he isn't a fraud, then why did he blatantly lied to me that the $3.00 USD were to cover the .NET Seal fees, and he posted irrelevant information which did not pertain to me.

Secondly, why has this incident occurred on multiple occasions?

Is it just a coincidence that people are complaining, just because this immoral con-artist is always right?

Cross posting is not allowed. Stick to One thread before you get your account warned and banned.

My Reply on your thread also quoting it here.

I am sorry OP but you are indeed wrong here. First of all, If you are a multi-accounter, I suggest you

Not to buy anything here because you will get same treatment.

Secondly, he took 3$ and refunded you the rest is completely fair. When you buy the product using that .NET Seal's Auto-Buy payment gateway , 1.5% + 0.5$ already get cut by the Auto-Buy system. So the refund you received is completely fair enough even if you didn't even used his product for a mere second.

Lastly , insulting you? Well that is just the way deals are done online you know. A coder+seller (In this case both are same) has so much immense pressure he receives 20-70 + Private messages and queries on average , per day. So if there occurs something wrong and its related with the buyer, then the buyer Should be ready for quite a lot flame thing. You'll never understand this till you don't Try coding and selling a crypter here. Heck, some users i personally have met here on hf, They don't even know How to redeem the Serial code on .NET Seal applications. They just copy paste the serial blindly and copy BLANK spaces with it and afterwards they say Serial is not valid ??? So , you can imagine the rest of things.

n0$f3ratu$ has the right to protect his product as he pleases. Maintaining a crypter is NOT easy, so I don't find the precautions n0$f3ratu$ takes to be excessive at all. He refunded you, which is all that matters, and was rude to you, which in a big boys world, doesn't mean anything unless you want to let it affect you, which you're currently doing.

imposter johnson - September 20, 2013, 8:14 am

Depravity, the solution here is for you to go buy another crypter. You were refunded and I would be happy with that. If you have been on HF as long as I have, you would know that the majority of the time refunds dont happen + they keep being nice to you or dont talk to you. You on the other hand had it good, you got a refund and he was "rude". So that should tell you your next move, get a different crypter. There was no scamming here. The only thing there was is a bad attitude to which I say, so what. Move on with life. If you have not learned how to deal with difficult people, then you will have a hard time in life.

If no$, has a hunch your someone else, and you are not, then chalk it up to bad luck. If you made a crypter and you think someone who bought your crypter under a new identity and in the past that person repeatedly made your product detected, which takes alot of work to fix, would you keep them and take a risk? Or would you ban and refund them to make it right? I personally would ban you, to keep the product good. I have nothing against you, but I would not take risks, with so much coding involved and so much work to be done when it gets detected. Having the right customers who are smart about their crypting needs is EVERYTHING in this business. No$ has a job to do, he gets paid to keep detections from happening. If he feels anyone is a threat to his job of making things FUD, then naturally he will do whatever it takes to keep the product working for the people who paid for it. If he didnt ban you, then that would mean he cares more about the money, then looking out for his customers + his product.
