if you dont know who is DDoSing You contact your ISP and they will track him for you . And check you router setting as some routers has DoS protection or something like that.

Half of these things aren't hacking, the other half is basically a rename of the first half.

funkydude - September 24, 2013, 3:39 am

First of all change your IP address immediately and then start using/proxies and VPN(s).

You're helping skids continue being skids, you along the other guys in this section show there's a way to hack without knowing anything - Just click this click that. You're unintentionally feeding the cancer. :\

Tell them how to "up their game" a little bit.

It will make a great difference and hopefully, reduce the numbers of skids browsing this section.

Vaxorr - October 5, 2013, 9:48 am what do u mean sir ? Pls tell me what you mean ?

Like instead of telling them to use these, these and these tools.

Why don't you suggest them to work on their own, and even tell them in which programming language they could code it. This way, it will create 2 groups : people who wants to stay skids by using premade tools, and people who want to learn and explorer and will actually make stuff by themself.

mmmm.... I know what you mean ok this thread will be closed now and i will make a better one .

#R00T~ - October 5, 2013, 10:09 am

you spelt the title wrong, maybe fix that.

You just gotta wonder whether people actually need help at where to click, that's just pointing them the obvious. Everything can be answered by Google ^^
