R3V3RSE - November 4, 2013, 12:25 pm

just a little team for n00bs such as myself where we can learn shit together and share what we know pm me if you want to join so to speak :)

i.e (basic RAT setup, port forwarding, keyloggers, worms, stealers)

ConditionsMust speak basic english.

Some knowlege in SQLi Injection

Skype

I can the most of hacking i can teatch u all i need some partners

sophrosyne - November 4, 2013, 12:33 pm

Might want to include some grammar skills as one of the requirements.

Good luck with this! Would also help if you expanded your items of which you will help with.
For Example, basic RAT setup, port forwarding, keyloggers, worms, stealers, etc..

Unfortunately, you don't seem to fulfil the first requirement of that group.

With more people who have average grammar knowledge, you will see that more people will use your service.

You may not care about that, but just a tip.

Fair point, I guess semi-decent grammar is in order.

tbh that's a preety good idea to learn more

GreatCyber - April 15, 2014, 3:35 pm

Dude if you're still looking for someone in your team, PM me. I'm a n00b too

Brule - April 15, 2014, 3:37 pm

I wouldn't classify 'RAT'ing as Hacking, but good luck on your team.

Spritz - April 15, 2014, 4:29 pm

-First language is english (north-american)

-I know more SQLi than SQLi injection but I do know some

-gohnjeen@gmail.com

I know some h4k3r stuff and I've been looking for something like this.

Also, I'm also good a coding & math and I'm starting network hacking.

cyberducky - April 15, 2014, 4:31 pm

These groups never turn out good. You guys will end up convincing each other you are skilled and will go on a doxing spree. You will end up trying to dox a more skilled "hacker" than yourselves and will most likely quit the internet.

/just my opinion
