I'm an accomplished web developer and I'm somewhat known for smooth, crisp, animated sites, with dynamic content. I don't venture outside of web development as far as coding goes so all of my mental capacity when it comes to coding goes towards web development, so rest assured I could definitely be the guy your looking for.

papabear550 - November 22, 2013, 4:31 pm

well I can say that I'm very good because I'm still relying on googling answers in case I'm stuck and researching good solutions and code application that is better to improve the code quality of a software. I'm actually a Desktop Application Developer but I'm a bit involved in Website Development. So if you are willing to work with me, just drop me a pm as I can't actually post my skype in public because I'm a private person y'know :P

I've tried to get into that market but if you are in the US forget about it.

If you are very interested in doing something like this and have capital to work with, PM me. Maybe we can talk about going into business together.

And with an exchanger site I doubt you want to hire a one man person for that.

Most websites face the question of will we get hacked?

But with an exchanger site the question is WHEN will you be hacked.

So hiring a professional team with experience to work on your project and give you your own secluded server to host it on is the route to go.

There is a reason why Google and other tech companies are employing people from India and Central Europe because for same knowledge in US you would pay 50k but out there in other parts prices can be as low as 10 times so 5k the most.

Do not talk about economy I'm sure you are not familiar besides the us?

Hello,

I'm on a three month vacation and I'm eagerly looking for something to code.
Honestly, I'm not much of a creative guy, else I wouldn't be looking for a project to work on.
So if you're looking for a project that needs a perfect design, then I might not be the best guy.

I will need my time if you want me to create a really beautiful design.

I might have a lack of creativity, but on the otherhand: I consider myself to be a good coder.
I make up for my lacks in persistence and quality of the backend.
Security is on my mind with every line of code that I write.

I'm not afraid of trying the impossible. I've had to deal with customers who have forced me to do things in PHP, which most people consider unrealistic.

My proudest previous work:

Skype: PM only, I'm not a fan of giving the public my skype ID. Fuck you NSA

Kasual™ - July 17, 2014, 12:36 pm

I'm almost finished developing a automated system for currency exchange.

I have sent you a PM of the site preview.

My skype is:

I'm fairly experienced in PHP and HTML. I usually use a theme for my CSS because I'm only learning CSS.
