

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: What IDE do you guys use to code in python?

AEXXI - December 3, 2013, 4:54 am

Any nooby friendly IDE that I can use that isn't IDLE. I know the basics and wanted to start getting into the some new stuff. help would be appreciated.

frenchtoast - December 3, 2013, 5:00 am

do you know there are at least 10 other threads like this?

i still use IDLE, i tried getting into Sublime Text, but except for that neat scrolling feature it just kept getting in my way

ki113d - December 3, 2013, 5:49 am

PyCharm is by far my favourite. Either that or vim ^^

dberube - December 3, 2013, 7:26 am

Spyderlib for small projects or Komodo IDE for large one.

Bean Dip - December 3, 2013, 8:04 am

I personally use sublime/light table.

If your stuck using idle i feel bad for you...

Jeff_F - December 3, 2013, 10:27 am

I use either IDEL or PyScripter. Either one works just fine for me.

feudin - December 3, 2013, 11:37 am

So many of these threads, that being said, i use gedit.

Dr. Strangelove - December 3, 2013, 12:49 pm

IdleX, improves on IDLE quite a bit.

<http://idlex.sourceforge.net/features.html>

AEXXI - December 3, 2013, 1:51 pm

Thanks for your help guys, Im sorry that I didn't know there were any other threads like this.

clark.dll - December 3, 2013, 1:52 pm

I only really used IDLE, but apparently Pycharm's amazing.

-Max - December 3, 2013, 5:22 pm

I use VIM personally, I can't stand a big heavy IDE

Goldbach - December 3, 2013, 8:33 pm

Sublime, its honestly really nice and easy to use

Goodies - December 3, 2013, 8:34 pm

C:/Windows/System32/notepad.exe

No I'm kidding. I often just use nano... I HATE VIM! It's so fucking complicated.

frenchtoast - December 4, 2013, 3:25 am

syntax highlighting...check multiple files open at once...check basic text editor features...check

all right im sold boys

Evanescent - December 4, 2013, 4:43 am

Use python's IDLE, simple and compact.

?Alexander - December 4, 2013, 11:46 am

I only used IDLE. I couldn't figure out how the fuck Eclipse worked and I cba to look up tutorials so I gave up...

Enzyme - December 4, 2013, 2:35 pm

I'm using IDLE. It's what I started out with and haven't tried any other sort of IDE.

ApertureSecurity - December 4, 2013, 8:30 pm

I hate IDE's! I usually use kwrite then descended from the heavens an IDE that I can use....
PYCHARM! I love Pycharm! simply intuitive and really easy to manage! try it out!