Thread: [OmniCoin \[OMC\] - HF's Unofficial Crypto Currency - Scrypt Based - Omni Approved.](#)

SIM-888979 - December 12, 2013, 12:40 am

OmniCoin is a BELLS fork created by DogeCoin's developer, billym2k. This is still early alpha and will be subjected to changes. Graphics are not completed yet however the alpha window bin has been compiled.

This was compiled and developed by Aurora and Billym2k, developer of DogeCoin.

Choo choo all aboard the new crypto currency hype train.

Edit: I can't seem to use the minning feature built into the program.

Moxxi - December 12, 2013, 12:41 am

vouch for this, i made the graphic for the coin

SIM-888979 - December 12, 2013, 12:47 am

Don't get confused if you see Bells related graphics, it is a bells fork which was compiled by the Bells developer, we just forgot to change the GFX. We'll be recompiling it ASAP.

I would suck his dick so hard until it's dry and thin like ikan bilis (look it up).

Not yet, however I'm intending to make this really good if we have good community support from the public, such as setting up pools and services.

BTC was seen as a coin that wasn't going to be worth anything, and now it's a few hundred dollars. Please tell me more about how you know the market so well. OMC has no value, the value is determined by the users.

No one cares if you're not going to mine these, they can't mine other coins so why not mine this for fun? It's for the sake of building a community, not making a profit off of things.

Well the thing with BTC is that not many people knew about it in the start. But here every one knows about Omnicoin and Dogecoin etc. IT can't go up in value because of that.

The same shit would happen with BTC as well if many people would have mine thousands of coins every day!

Difficulty has rose to 0.06. Solo GPU mining might be viable but you may only get a block every hour or so. Not to mention your speed is pretty slow due to a Nvidia card, you probably won't find a block anytime soon.

I'm getting 1760 KH/s. A "decent" hash rate for solo mining, and a "decent" hash rate for pooled mining are completely different things. To solo mine, I'd say you need at least 1 MH/s. For pooled mining, I'd say if you have 400 KH/s+ you'd turn a profit. To be honest though, I don't see these being worth very much - which is why I stopped mining.

I invested $1,800 in a mining rig about a week ago, and I'm still trying to break even. (Which is why I stopped mining OmniCoins) If you really want to make money - look into LiteCoins, WorldCoins, or even BitBars (Which are actually unique in their own way, unlike all of the other 100+ LiteCoin clones.)

I'm envious of you. I was going to build a mining rig, but then my business teacher that was going to invest the majority of the capitol had to run it past his wife that way she wouldn't freak when he withdraws $600, and she told him to wait until the holidays are over. Hmm I would suggest you to use CGMiner and there is a tutorial here I think (just use a script based tutorial if someone didn't write one for OmniCoin). Not sure if this wallet implemented miner works.

And CGMiner offers you all info when you mine and it's really stable so it's recommended.

While the brand of OmniCoins sounds pretty cool actually. I can't say I'm a fan of my cartoon image being used. From an aesthetic point of view I don't think it will scale well. Also if I was you and you really want to pay homage then use purple in the icon. Maybe a purple letter O would suffice instead of the cartoon. A gold coin with a purple O, or maybe silver. I just think a better image could be made that might have more universal appeal.

Quote:No, as it won't ever be used outside of HF.

I think that's because you have my image in it. You might stand a chance for usage if you actually listen to me for branding.

I think we're about to reach the point where Omnicoin would only succeed on bitcointalk if it was reannounced without a public premine this huge. Only problem is, to do this, you'd have to kill off omnicoin or come up with a new name, and the latter is probably the only thing that wouldn't cause extreme confusion (The first idea is also somewhat impossible).

I've set up a makeshift OmniCoin block explorer for all of you who wanted it. It's not as intuitive as it could be, but it's a work in progress. You can all access it here:

I know I had some issues with compiling Omnicoinind due to the boost in the repos missing some dependencies. Didn't try making them from the DLs on Boost.org. Don't see why a compiled binary wouldn't run though.

Allegedly because it's compiled on a Debian-based system and executed on a RHEL system. We're currently working on compiling it on my CentOS test box.

I don't think you know what you're talking about when it comes to coins. If you regularly watch new coins being posted you will see how much shit they can get for not being posted on ANY of the major coin forums. This just happened to Netcoin, I'm not saying it's impossible to do without posting at bitcointalk but it has become something that is a huge helping hand if you want to get going. You say we don't need validation or promotion through them that's fine, but you should think about it in the terms they know a lot of things you, me, or a lot of members here don't know. They could have helped in making pools, making block explorers, making faucets, giveaways, etc. Why not try to diversify the coin? Why not get the word of the coin get out to the public, the very public who grows coins and gives them real value.

If we are talking about this forum only using the coins that's fine, but if we wanted to try to get this a bigger coin to be possibly used in the future we are shooting ourselves in the foot by not doing it. Whats the bad thing about posting it there in your opinion?

The coins birthplace is already on HackForums which can scare a lot of people off.

Anyways I guess we may have different views when it comes to good marketing and good coin knowledge :P

To be honest, I think that Omni's spot on on this one. As both a theoretical marketer, and a self proclaimed Crypto Currency expert. We don't need promotion or validation from BitcoinTalk, since we have a budding community around it here. It may not be on Cryptsy without a post there, but it's budding, and it's supported by the community here.

I think a fair amount of us on here at least have a BitcoinTalk account, though I'm not 100% on that, so we are part of the BitcoinTalk community, so more or less, it's been picked up by some of the community already. But the important word here, is community. We have one.

Sliar does have a point. If the coin is going to rise in value, it will probably increase more if posted on Bitcointalk. Many people on that forum have at least decent rigs, while people on here are mining with a few kh/s or botnets (stereotypical).

However, Omniscient really has the power to have an impact of the coin's value. Let him market/advertise it correctly, and everyone (at least on this forum) will be all over it.

Either way, it's whether we want the coin to have an actual value, or to just be used on this forum.

Again that doesn't give it a value. It just puts the crypto currency in circulation. I'm sure at Bitcointalk everyone just puts their miners on for a few hours into any crypto currency just to do it and hold a pile of them just in case. If you think 100 people having 10,000 coins creates value you're mistaken. You want 10,000 people having 100 coins and those 10,000 people to actually have a use for them.

Once again taking words out of context, what I said was we had a limited amount of time were we could post it without having a bunch of troll spamming the thread about a altrelease. It could gain value on its own, I was looking to speed up the process.

You're not thinking strategically. That's what I do and I do it very well.
Once again we just think differently. Not trying to attack you or your methods at all. I mean thats what these forums are about having discussions.

I meant marketing in the terms of marketing the coins, I could have phrased that better.

Exactly. If I put into place mechanisms for actual use of the coin it will have immediate value even if only just here. But we're the larger community. Much larger in fact. Why care about promoting at a site that's 1/10 the size of HF?

Never said it had no value, once again I was saying bitcointalk to speed up the process of getting MORE value faster.

Like I said above, I do believe we have alot of amazing intelligent members here who could help. But the more people helping the more work that can be done.

So what is your idea? That's what I am still curious about. Beginning your plan based on HACKFORUMS is no better than bitcointalk. The name HACKFORUMS may scare a lot of people off.

Mining doesn't create the value.
Not directly but more coins in circulation.

It's not a certainty but even we can give it value here that will spread to other sites. Maybe some of you clowns don't understand word-of-mouth marketing.

True but Omnicoin has a large amount of coins and it can trickle down

So to market any coin you must make sure there will be an end use.

Of course, that's common sense, I am still waiting to know what you are thinking, or are you just planning on using it to trade of HF?

Oh I see now what you think is important. That those at Bitcointalk are told early so they can mine a gazillion coins first and then they can hype them because they want to sell them quick. That's bullshit HYPE. We don't need that. It does not create value.

Never said I want a pump and dump, don't put words in my mouth, the original reason I even said put it on bitcointalk was because a lot of users here couldn't mine for awhile because there was no pools, etc

Anyways, I'll just end with this.

It is not impossible for the coin to get value without posting it anywhere else, it is MY opinion though that it would help move things along faster. We just have differing views on things. I'm totally cool with that, we are free to take it whichever way we want.

I assume since the coin is named after you Aurora is talking to you about future plans, I wish you guys and this coin the best, never tried to shittalk the coin.

I hope that someday the coin will be worth 0.01 0.10 1 Whatever I would love to see this happen, I was one of the first miners of this coin and even donated 20k of them to Aurora to give away for bounties.

The only question I really have is I just want to know why you don't want to post the coin there? Aside from the fact you don't think we need to (once again you are entitled to your opinion) I just want to know why you are so against posting it? Don't want them to mine more than us? Value?

Think it will be killed? Ego :P j/k etc?.

It has been fun debating btw :D always love a good debate.

1. That's only for currency exchanging. No actual items or services beyond that.
2. Currency Exchange Our currency exchange section is about 5 times larger.

You're only proving my point. We don't need the help of a smaller site no matter how dedicated it is to crypto currency. We are still the larger community and we've been adapting to coins for some time now.

Quote:Never said we couldn't just said more people could help it grow faster.
How does a 1/10 the size of our community help us grow faster?

Quote:Never said it had no value, once again I was saying bitcointalk to speed up the process of getting MORE value faster.

The only speeding up bitcointalk MIGHT do is mining. That's it. If anything though that has the potential to lower the currency value in our own community.

Quote:So what is your idea? Thats what I am still curious about. Begining your plan based on HACKFORUMS is no better then bitcointalk. The name HACKFORUMS may scare alot of people off.

Without going into full details I believe some integrations of custom HF coin like OmniCoin could create value for our community. If it goes beyond that then great. That would be how I prefer to market. Hying a currency around the web at random places won't give it value. Dogecoin might be the exception because of the power 4chan has to disseminate just about anything to the entire web.

Quote:Mining doesn't create the value.

Not directly but more coins in circulation.

More coins in circulation means LESS value. However it's the increased difficulty of mining that does create rarity for newcomers which can increase value. It's conceptually pretty new how BTC value has marketed itself. It's not traditional and it's very experimental. I am just as encourage to be just as experimental. What is there to lose?

Quote:True but Omnicoin has a large amount of coins and it can trickle down
I believe I could put things in place to deal with coins in circulation.

Quote:Never said I want a pump and dump, don't put words in my mouth
And I never said anything about dumping. I just mentioned creating hype. So don't put words into my mouth.

Quote:the original reason I even said put it on bitcointalk was because alot of users here couldn't mine for awhile because their was no pools, etc
And I can address that if I begin to make this an official coin and work to get members to create nodes and pools.

Quote:I assume since the coin is named after you Aurora is talking to you about future plans, I wish you guys and this coin the best, never tried to shittalk the coin.
Yes, some back and forth convo has occured but because it's holiday season any real implementations would need to be in January.

Quote:The only question I really have is I just want to know why you don't want to post the coin there?

It's not that I don't want it posted there. But you stated we needed to and that we had better hurry up. That's where I don't agree. And to be honest I don't think we should officially create a thread there at all.

Quote: Don't want them to mine more then us?

That's part of it. The OmniCoin should be given it's highest value here. If you allow bitcointalk strangers to mine millions of them the first few months you're just taking away from this community. Do you believe bitcointalk members have any actual noble cause other than to mine every currency they can and hoarde while praying they gain value to someone? Is it fair that a crypto currency designed for this site (at least unofficially) would need to be purchased from people that don't even participate here?

Quote:It has been fun debating btw :D always love a good debate.
Yes, but maybe you can actually use quote tags for once.

And just to give you guys one radical adoption of the currency. Imagine to post in the marketplace any threads you would be required to pay in OMC. Maybe not a lot but enough so that you'll be forced to have a wallet eventually. Just that simple (not so simple to implement) idea could create tremendous immediate value to everyone in this community that's already doing business. Imagine also an OmniCoin award. Obviously it would be purchased. My guess is that we'd sell 200 of them in the first month. If they were priced correctly we could then adjust the value of Omnicoin by taking some of coins out of circulation. Another concept is accepting Omnicoin for the 3p1c group.

We could have official nodes, pools, and chain site, and storage wallets.

So much potential here and I know how the word potential sounds even to my own ears. But exactly what prevents OMC from being a widely used crypt currency on HF? So wide in fact that other sites may begin adopting it.

It won't help it grow faster. It would, however, get it in front of people that wouldn't have seen it otherwise. Regardless, HF does have a much larger community, and more active as well.

You're quite right about that. Acceptance has more to do with value.

I'd love to see this become official. It'd be amazing to see how it grows in what I'd call a "closed ecosystem".

That's something I hadn't thought of. It would be spread out, and undoubtedly, people would hoard them, people would try and pump them, etc.

That would be absolutely fantastic, though something tells me that it'd be much more gradual. I do hope that it reaches this. I know I'd happily be using them for HF functions. Also, this would force it to be used as an actual currency instead of a commodity, like Bitcoin has become in some circles.

That'd be interesting. Seeing it spread out from a central point. (HF) Perhaps it'd start being seen on some of the forums that advertise here.

That depends on which RPC you connect to. If you're using 127.0.0.1, then it will be transferred to your wallet, yes.

Generally it is adviseable that you use a mining pool. At the moment there is only one, mine :)

Imagine to post in the marketplace any threads you would be required to pay in OMC. Maybe not a lot but enough so that you'll be forced to have a wallet eventually. Just that simple (not so simple to implement) idea could create tremendous immediate value to everyone in this community that's already doing business. Imagine also an OmniCoin award. Obviously it would be purchased. My guess is that we'd sell 200 of them in the first month. If they were priced correctly we could then adjust the value of Omnicoin by taking some of coins out of circulation. Another concept is accepting Omnicoin for the 3p1c group. I see what you mean, once again I was thinking omnicoin more for Global and not as much local.

The funny think about you talking about the OmniCoin award, I was the first person to come up with that and suggest it in this thread within the hour or two of the coin launching and people quoted me saying Omni would never do that lol at that now.

definitive, Omniscient has a lot of knowledge about he is talking. Its a very high-risk launch a product, when its totally immature and not developed atleast to "positionate the product in buyer's mind against other altcoins. This is one very basic marketing rule as others.

And furthermore, he has a good point. When BTC start getting famous? Around some months, I know 6-7 months when was 30-50e only, and never heard about it! Not "showed in forums and nothing" and was created since 2009.

And what happened?

See now...

For all guys that u think that this coin will be considered premine.. This is not a shit "altcoin" who has not support. See how many altcoins get success with a small projects getting value, and how others without big communities behind them, fall in the hell or are considered scam's.

In my opinion, he is taken care about the idea and project, and he is waiting to launch the product when he gets a good opportunity. Think that not all Business RL, launches his products without having a "good study about the RL situation at moment, and all segment's from the market.

Well you'd still be battling all the other miners to get the block , and if you dont, you won't earn anything at all.

In a pool you will earn a percentage of the block reward, which is of course less than the whole reward, but you'd have a better chance of actually finding any blocks before someone else does.

Make sure that you specify the pool url with the stratum+tcp:// protocol designation. For example:

Code stratum+tcp://omc.pools.doctor-blue.net

Also, if it's a stratum port, it'll still be using stratum, since it's on a separate port entirely, regardless of if it says http.

What cryptic said, but also including correct IP address and port number:

Use that and you should be mining.

If you're using your CPU, you should use cpuminer, since the built in miner doesn't actually support stratum ?

Also, Crypto™, not Cryptic™ xP Since we get confused more than I care to mention. Just to clear that up ?.

I know, and I still haven't figured out how to change it, but I think I mentioned it in all caps 3 times in my thread or something.

Quote:THIS IS IMPORTANT TO GET YOUR MINER WORKING, DONT JUST SKIP IT

The stratum IP is NOT as listed on the website, but actually stratum+tcp://37.59.39.91:3333

You're using the wrong pool URL. It is vital that you include stratum+tcp:// in front of the address and :3333 after it, otherwise you will end up trying to access it over HTTP.

Also note that you MUST use stratum+tcp://37.59.39.91:3333 and NOT stratum+tcp://omc.pools.doctor-blue.net:3333, as the latter is automatically generated by mpos, and I just don't know how to change it yet.

Quote:Connection timed out/rejected

I was in a rush, so I just went straight to the link xP I'll see if I can find anything, since I've seen other pools change it. Also, you might be able to create a SRV record in your DNS so that the URL would actually work. Not sure on that last one though.

Why, with your fellow members of HF!

One example would be regexks_ <https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=3940492>

"Without going into full details I believe some integrations of custom HF coin like OmniCoin could create value for our community." - If it gets integrated, even more people on HF will want to buy it. Not to mention a possible price increase. :)

We can't wait to see what OMC will become. ? ?

Obli - December 27, 2013, 3:53 am

Guys, I've thought of something.

Why are we doing all this? Why are we having hundreds, if not thousands of coins in our wallets? We can't let OMCs crash to the point of $0.0004/coin like other coins, IF anyone starts using it (check junkcoins and other alts for reference). It would be much better to have a few coins. Look at BTCs. Not everyone has 1 BTC, more like 0.xx BTCs. I'm not saying that we should imitate BTC, just saying that it would be a bad idea to mine a lot of OMCs since then the value will drastically go down.

Jeff Jordan - December 27, 2013, 4:01 am

Erm, that's not entirely true. Bitcoin was comparable to this at this point in its life cycle. Mining was a breeze, the block reward hadn't halved, and Bitcoins weren't being used anywhere. It's not the introduction of coins, it's the adoption. That, and the introduction of coins is hard coded into the Omnicoin network, so it can't really be changed without causing a hard fork, and fucking everything up.

Dogecoin has been added to exchange sites, and people are still trading them, so it does have value. People were trading around 1 BTC per 1 million Doges. Just because the coin is a joke doesn't mean there's no profit to be made. I agree with you that in the long run, BTC is the clear winner of crypto currencies, but with enough hype and support, any coin can have value.

What makes you say that? Dogecoin has value. It has value, because people give it value. Just because it doesn't have value to you, doesn't make it valueless as a whole. Plus, Omni has mentioned integrating it into HF, which would give it intrinsic value, instead of just value as an instrument of speculation.

3270 - December 27, 2013, 6:48 am

You should propose it to be added on cryptsy only downside is that the coin isn't only in this community anymore but that's also the advantage.

Even though you can't get a lot, you will still make a great deal of money if they suddenly increase in value and difficulty.

You're right, if it starts to be useful it will be difficult to mine, but then you already have a bunch of coins.

I consider it gambling with computing power.

I don't know if this is going to be worth anything, but I'm just mining while my graphics card is idle already so the power increase isn't a lot higher than usual.

If it happens to gain value and I have a couple of million, I can make a few thousand dollars and that's fine by me. It wouldn't be worthwhile with any established currency because the difficulty is too high, this is another way to make money without investing too much. I did it with dogecoin, and I almost made 900 USD through 3 days of mining on my personal computer.

It just depends on how much people are willing to pay for it. Ex:

Me:"I have virtual bananas, I will sell you to them for $800 each."

You: "Okay!"

Think of this as gold Mr Stark :P

What gives it value is people, the rarity, the collection, the uses.

But when it comes down to it its the people.

You need to have all your slaves mine through your stratum proxy so you won't have to create a worker login for each of them on the pool.

This time I bring with me one of the first projects I got me. The design from scratch a quadricopter. Based on simple materials and stabilization PWM, which gave him a pretty good stability. We used their programming in assembler on a PIC16F818.

Although I am now working on a prototype using DSPIC return with voice control.

This file is about 29MB and has photos, program and everything needed for installation.

The link will send by MP and the cost of this will be a symbolic amount of 1000 OMC in oNwwcZkEKmLRWV6vQoS2AfkpUTkxJVckMn

I leave a video that you may see the cool features that you can do with these devices??

The net hashrate is just a rough estimate based on the difficulty and the time spent solving the block, which is why it may be lower or higher than the actual estimate.

It's most likely just because everyone is on the same pool. The difficulty is changing up and down constantly because the hashrate is moving around between 1 and 10 MH/s. Tenfold hashrate means tenfold difficulty and vice versa.

The value of omnicoin is simply what people are willing to pay for it.

Well apart from the fact that it hardly ever works, mining with a pool (and your GPU) is a huge advantage if your computer is a bit slow.

172,800,000 coins. You can find the number by doubling the numbers shown below from where it starts looking right.

The thread was written when HF replaced characters if they were repeated more than thrice, which makes his numbers look pretty weird.

Omniscient changed the limit to 6 characters now, but Aurora would have to put it back in his thread.

Yes it has.

It's not like you need to be a professional to install a PCI card and start cgminer.

Buy an ASIC miner instead of wasting the time on cloud mining. For instance, the BFL Monarch, at current difficulty, pays back in 20 days. CEX.IO pays back in somewhere between 150 and 200 days. It requires a huge investment to actually pay you back and really earn anything at all.

Selling some OMC if anyone's interested in buying.

Ultimist - January 24, 2014, 1:39 pm

A bit confused here. I've mined a bit of OMC over the past few weeks.

But the original post says there are only 172800 coins, total.... yet I see people talking about selling thousands and millions of them... So how many coins are there, actually?

2700

675000

We don't need Aurora to make this coin go boom :) (sorry Aurora). Its not the developers that make the coin, its the community. Hell, you could have a coin with a dozen active developers that would still fall to a coin with one inactive developer and a thriving community.

We don't need to rely on Aurora, or any coin Dev for that matter. We just need to create the change that we wish to see.

The coin's open source, so anyone can Dev for it, anyone can create a service or product for/with OMC, so stop waiting for Aurora, and be that change :)

While I agree with most of what you said, I'd really love to see someone fix the Mac wallet and make sure it will compile with some slightly older versions of boost as well, because it doesn't work on Debian 6, it doesn't work on CentOS 5/6 and it only works on some versions of Ubuntu, because boost and glibc are too outdated in their repos.

But yes, most of this just requires work from the community, not much from the developer, but he should make sure it works.

No one's really buying them at the moment, and if they do their at ridiculously low rates.

Just hold on to them and hope that Omni integrates it into HF like he said he may do.

That's why I'm mining as much as possible.

It isn't, I can assure you. (Unless that poster uploaded it with the intentions of distributing a virus)
It's just guessing because there's a lot of sites that distribute viruses that have miners in them, so a lot of virus scanners automatically assume they are a virus.

If this coin somehow does get a value on hackforums then there are some very big stake holders lol, also whats with the specs? - Total Coins: 172800 < Surely thats wrong?

I like the idea, and i wish you all the best but i think it needs more of an appealing factor to it.. If Aura doesn't become more active contact me and i can sort out this coin, if it comes to the worst ill make a fresh one and actually create an pre-ann so people can get hype and mine with fairness (Just an offer). A coin which has its own value among a forum, I love it though.

Missing a few zeroes, eaten by the repeat filter. I can't remember if it's 172M, or 1.72B. I'm also working on pushing this coin forward. Looking to implement KGW, as well as some other features which will make everything putter along much more smoothly. Not to mention I'm trying to hype the fuck out of it on here.
