Thread: [In Beginner Hacking Section: Add &\[b\]#34\[/b\];Social Media&\[b\]#34\[/b\]; Section](#)

MrTing - December 16, 2013, 5:32 pm

The Suggestion: Add a Social Media section within the Beginner Hacking forum.

The Reason: Every day, there are numerous threads made on Facebook hacking and other related social media websites. These threads, although allowed, clog up the Beginner Hacking form, as well as make it an eye sore for other users. Moving them to a separate section would:

1. Clean up threads within the Beginner Hacking forum.
2. Create a higher quality Beginner forum, where genuine hacking questions can be answered.
3. Redirect new users with questions about Social Media hacking to the right place.

Also, this would be extremely easy to implement, as It is only several clicks in AdminCP.

Awesome Idea Deception.. Social media hacking is usually clogging the main thread!

I'm not sure if this is the best idea...

I'm torn between suggesting a thread prefix and agreeing.

A prefix wouldn't change anything to that situation to be honest. We really need to put these threads in another section. And this is the first new section area I support as it's will be relatively easy to find "100" threads to show that.

I would assume the Website and Forum Hacking subforum would be more appropriate than the Beginner Hacking subforum.

I would be happy if it was in either section. This, or have it in one of the sections and a redirect in the other.

Terry A. Davis - December 16, 2013, 8:07 pm

Oh god please no. It would be full of spammers that just are so lq. That is why I have stopped helping in the BHS. But god it is horrible enough, please don't make it worse.

There's already a subforum for hacking websites, so you could count that as social media.

You could attempt to request a thread prefix but I doubt it'll pull through as we have no need for it.

Sparta - December 16, 2013, 8:21 pm

This doesn't really make sense. It looks fine without a "Social Media Hacking" subforum/subsection.

Terry A. Davis - December 16, 2013, 8:23 pm

Oh yeah while we're at it, if this does go through with it remove Ewhore and put it in marketing and replace it with social media hacking

It already is terrible, that is why we are trying to move them to a different section where we wouldn't necessarily have to see them.

It it is like shoving your room's mess under your bed. Just hiding it not curing it. The BHS does have to be cleaned up, but nothing we do will ever change it without causing to much trouble

The main point of this thread was to deal with the clogging threads, so I am open to any ideas even if it means something else than my suggestion. Everyone can agree that the BHS is terrible right now, just fixing it and curing it like you said, is the tough part.

hellozephyr123 - December 17, 2013, 8:16 am yeah definitely i totally agree with that

Dropbox - December 17, 2013, 8:27 am i agree with this idea because it would make the forum look more nice and tidy, good suggestion bud

Error #404 - December 17, 2013, 8:35 am

Support, we either need a dedicated section for it or to stop allowing it. It spams so many sections that are slightly relating to it.

Gustav - December 17, 2013, 9:43 am

TBH-- I don't think anything will implemented to the beginner hacking section, same thing with Gay Req and Hulu & Netflix section. Those sections, Omniscient doesn't really care about. Guessing that he'd like to keep the Low Quality in one place.

Jemjem787 - December 17, 2013, 3:49 pm

I agree, whenever i go there all i see is one post leechers who ask "H0w i h4x f4c3b00k) and they leave and never come back.

MrTing - December 28, 2013, 5:17 pm

Posting again with how the Beginning Hacking Section is. It's getting worse, I think we can all agree.

Revenge - December 29, 2013, 4:50 am

The beginner hacking section is there for a reason. It keeps all the other sections clean so it's fine the way it is in my opinion.

This section is supposed to be meant for actual help, not to keep in piles of low quality threads.

(Dec 29, 2013 11:18 AM)Deception-X Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) This section is supposed to be meant for actual help, not to keep in piles of low quality threads. Let me tell you something,

Social media hacking is something that takes precision timing and a form of social engineering, which isn't allowed here. That could be one reason why this section won't be implemented.

I know you made atleast one of those threads you call Low Quality in the past of your Hackforums account, didn't you? And don't deny it, we all did, most of us did. If you haven't you're not a real Hackforums members.

Those threads in that section are new members asking for help, they seem Low quality because those members are new, they come & go, that doesn't mean that section needs a whole new section. Don't you think the low quality will transfer onto the social media section? Have you ever taught of that.

You are requesting a social media section for hacking, but for what? Hacking Tutorials and Website and forum hacking section consists of various tutorials basing off Social media section, have you checked there? I assume not.

And you're wanting a genuine hacking section? There are going to be loads of members coming through that you think is a form of low quality. That isn't going to change, not at all. It's a process here on Hackforums.

And as for you redirecting users to social media hacking section, isn't that what the beginner hacking section is? But no, you instead call those members 'LQ'. I can tell you straight that there will still be a form of low quality going through this forum.

Lastly, I'd like to question you on your reason why And I quote Quote:Every day, there are numerous threads made on Facebook hacking and other related social media websites. These threads, although allowed, clog up the Beginner Hacking form, as well as make it an eye sore for other users. Moving them to a separate section would

What those members aren't doing is using the search feature, they instead continue to post otherwise, but is it a crime here on Hackforums to post? Instead of asking for a brand new section, why not instead refer those members into the correct section by providing a link to the tutorial or answer the question that they are seeking for. The Beginner hacking section where members come to ask questions about hacking, no matter how LQ you think it is, it will still be apart of Hackforums, hence the name.

I don't think this will be added, if it is then Congratulations, you got what you wanted ?
