Indeed, I'll keep this short:

Size sold the project because he simply didn't have the time for it-> Me and Vavuxx took the source over -> We're now selling this as a new product which we will constantly update with fancy features

Why ?

It would be a waste to let such an excellent piece of software gone in waste, me and Vavuxx will improve Big Bang RAT in every aspect and add all necessary features in the coming future. This RAT will be revolutionary!

It's not that similar tbh. Big Bang RAT is coded in VB6, while Plasma RAT is coded in VB.NET. We have a better execution rate because Plasma RAT has dependencies and we don't. Plasma RAT also has some other features us. So actually.. You can't really compare us, these are 2 different RAT's. ?

We'll slowly add fancy features such as a miner, stealer, botkiller, keylogger, screenrecorder, funmanager etc.. but by doing this we don't want to hurt the stability of Big Bang RAT.

Cakeb$$$ - December 25, 2013, 4:46 pm

Review

BBR is a rat that is mainly focused on holding and ddosing.

I don't know if this will change with time as more features is added. but what I know is that it's great at what it does currently.

I mainly used BBR with hacked servers and found that it delivers great stability. It's great for holding bots which also was the main way I used it.

Just for this review I also felt the need to test it's ddosing ability.

I must say that I was surprised with the great amount of options and customization of the attacks.

Depending on the quality of your bots you can optimize the attacks.

Since i was using servers mainly I was able to crank it up pretty high.

With the great UDP-RND flood I was able to keep three home connections down at the same time with just five bots. So to summarize everything.

Great holding bot with some really customizable ddos features.

Things I like

[?]Small bin

[?]Very stable, great for holding

[?]Great DDOS

[?]Works great as a cheap loader

Also credit to DOOM for this great design i used in my review.
