I'm glad to say that I have done some throughout testing with 143VPN and I'm highly satisfied. Speed, Connection, Reliability and support is all top-notch.
My internet dropped just a small notch when connecting to the USA location, amazing.
Before one reaches to look at the payment receipt, you already received your VPN! Speed.
Connecting and portforwarding could never been any easier, clean and nice client GUI who makes it easier to navigate than ever.

I hereby vouch for Eternal and 143VPN.
Good luck with sales!

Because we do not keep personal logs. I know the owner of the server and it's locked down. Even if the data center was compromised they wouldn't be able to trace it to an individual.

Hello Hackiee here.

I am about to buy your Lifetime OPEN port.

Question: Any german servers ?

Kind Regards.

We have servers that will, but Omni doesn't recommend you use a VPN on HF because he could merge your account.

Send the value of the package you want to the address below.

Saw 143VPN being advertised and thought of giving it a try.

Site is very neat and easy to browse, no complications at all.

All packages are explained thoroughly, and they are distributed to fit all the needs, no money is wasted!

Signing up is very easy and is done through a few simple steps.

Delivery is instant and the system is automated! AMAZING!

But wait, this is your first time using a VPN? Don't worry, 143VPN will guide you step by step through the articles in the knowledgebase.

Didn't face any problems, but thought of checking their ticket system, easy to submit tickets, and reply came within the next few minutes! Amazing support.

The knowledgebase contains almost everything you need to know and would answer all your questions, make sure you read it.

mykil - January 19, 2014, 6:52 am

OK I will go through the knowledge base

I would prefer someone just pointing to one doc on how to set this up but yeah I guess I can spend the next hour going through the KB or just read through the 24 pg thread trying to figure it out but a basic bullet point howto would be cool ... wouldn't you think?

I responded to your ticket. Awaiting your response sir.

Make sure your firewall is off, and all Anti Virus software, including windows defender. Open the panel at 143VPN.com/panel and enter your credentials, and the port you want open. Download the listener at 143vpn.com/downloads/listen.exe and listen to your port and open canyouseeme.org and you will be able to see your port open. If it isn't, it's because you have a firewall up, windows defender or an antivirus blocking it.

I was too dumb so I asked them some Dumb questions and they still Answered nicely

Support 10/10

VPN Speed 7/10 (Would give 10/10 if it had German servers but right now I have to use NL Servers)

Design 9/10

Would be even more awesome if they add German Servers.

How to open ports on new LA server, can we just use the LA server option in the client or webpanel, or is it not possible at this time.

Thanks for great VPN and customer service

You can open them on the client or the panel at 143vpn.com/panel

Something is wrong on your end, you need to make sure you are running the listening program and you have no firewall or AV blocking it.

Have got the new client already, so will try again with that and let you know. No firewall or AV running on this machine

EDIT - Tried with client, running it as Admin no firewall or AV and still cant open port on any of the server. Was working perfect till today, listening on port but nothing is staying closed for me.

You can port forward on the panel still. Pm me your team viewer info and I will have you working great in a few minutes.

You can delete it if you want as easily as you added it. The VPN client has some pretty advanced features, including adding, deleting routes and DNS flushing and things of that sort. Omni wants all data centers blocked, he threatens that if you use a VPN your account may be screwed and he advises against it.

Thanks for the vouches on my support, I do my best to provide superior support in the VPN market.

Here is a guide on how to set it up with Xbox Live.

What is the best package for Xbox Live use?

Eternal. - February 10, 2014, 7:42 pm

Depends if you want to ever have open ports or not. If so, the Open Port package. If not, the Closed port package.

Being coded already for the auto update, auto sign in? Like, always connected to the VPN from start up or?

That would be quite interesting? The option to add the VPN to connect to a certain server upon opening the application?

Or even better, the option to add the VPN to connect on windows start up, to a server of your choice.

Not sure how viable these options are, but are quite different, and could be useful.

d3d0h - February 11, 2014, 12:34 pm

Yeah the auto sign-in could be like, when you boot windows it automatically starts up and signs you in. I have another idea, i would like it the application will be ported to Linux and Mac OS. :)

Eternal. - February 11, 2014, 3:09 pm

Would love to have it ported, however I cannot find a developer to take the project. I would probably be able to find coders much easier if there was a coders marketplace. If you want to see this, I suggest you support my idea for a coders marketplace. You can see my thread here:

<https://hackforums.net/showthread.php?tid=4010176>

Doxicity - February 11, 2014, 4:56 pm

I would still love to see the coding marketplace implemented, it's a great idea so that coders can be found for the VPN, to make it even better.

Were still working on getting a Netherlands host.

Nightmare™ - February 11, 2014, 5:01 pm

I supported the coders marketplace thread :) Maybe make a post on your website about needing a port?

Eternal. - February 12, 2014, 2:29 am

What do you mean needing a port? You can port forward any server as long as its not taken.

d3d0h - February 12, 2014, 11:04 am

Well a port to macos/linux ;) Maybe if you post that on your website some people will see it and offer their help :)

Eternal. - February 12, 2014, 11:07 am

You can use the VPN on Linux, Mac, ios and Android, just not the client. I will look into it though.

Now are these shared IP's or does each client get his own IP?

Eternal. - February 16, 2014, 2:47 pm

143VPN uses OpenVPN which has been built with a strongly modular design. All of the crypto is handled by the OpenSSL library, and all of the IP tunneling functionality is provided through the TUN/TAP virtual network driver. The benefits of this modularity can be seen, for example, in the way that OpenVPN can be dynamically linked with a new version of the OpenSSL library and immediately have access to any new functionality provided in the new release. For example, when OpenVPN is built with the latest version of OpenSSL (0.9.7), it automatically has access to new ciphers such as AES-256 (Advanced Encryption Standard with 256 bit key) and the encryption engine capability of OpenSSL that allows utilization of special-purpose hardware accelerators to optimize encryption, decryption, and authentication performance. In the same way, OpenVPN's user-space design allows straightforward porting to any OS which includes a TUN/TAP virtual network driver.

We use shared IP's, for us to provide a high quality low cost service. Dedicated IP's for every customer would cost exponentially more. We are considering offering dedicated IP's, but they would be a subscription service monthly.

The client does, you are using the wrong version. Download the updated one at 143vpn.com/downloads

Hey, Please answer my ticket, thanks.

Eternal. - February 27, 2014, 1:01 pm

Answered yours I believe, you need to download it from 143vpn.com/downloads

Vola - February 27, 2014, 1:11 pm

I don't think that was me, as my question pertained to port forwarding.

Eternal. - February 27, 2014, 1:17 pm

Use a port between 10000-50000 on Florida, if that works, great. If not, something is blocking you on your pc or you aren't listening to the ports.

Vola - February 27, 2014, 1:22 pm

I'm still having this issue. I tried with Florida and it still appears to be closed. Just to verify the steps:

1. Connect to Florida VPN
2. Go to Port Settings in client, set server as Florida, and enter some port between 10k and 50k. Submit.
3. Open TCP listener and add that port to the list.
4. Check if port is open on yougetsignal.com

Is this all correct?

Go to 143vpn.com/panel if the client fails, and usually you should port forward before connecting the the VPN.

Vola - February 27, 2014, 3:01 pm

Are ports that I forward via client/panel saved forever? Where can I view/remove ports I am using?

(Feb 27, 2014 04:01 PM)VirtuaNick Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Are ports that I forward via client/panel saved forever? Where can I view/remove ports I am using?

Saved forever, no. They get reset every once and a while, which is why I advise you to use a random number no one else would use and you will have to report forward.

You cannot see, only server admins can see.

You need to purchase an open port license. After that, you can port forward right through our client. It's extremely simple, and if you had any problems, you could always ask us.

Eternal. - March 3, 2014, 3:05 pm

Either use the client or 143vpn.com/panel for port forwarding. Make sure your firewall is off, and you run the listener to see the port.

Changed my pass ok just use a password with Uppercase,Lowercase and a symbol. User cant change VPN pass only VPN owner, i guess they are safe as i would have thought they are not stored on the webserver but would be nice to be sure.

I changed my password fine, just use at least one uppercase letter, one lowercase letter and one symbol in the password and you should be fine. There is no way to change the VPN password the owner has to do this, but i would imagine they are safe as there is no reason they would be on the webserver. But would be nice to have this confirmed to be sure.

Hello everyone, I will be available through PM if anyone needs assistance while I'm in school. I hope the product is working to it's fullest for all of you.

+mK - March 27, 2014, 5:13 pm

Never really used a VPN for the use of torrenting, but I have to ask, will this work with BitTorrent? My ISP are absolute assholes in regards to sending out warnings for downloading illegal, copyrighted content. I'm on my second out of third strike, and I'm just wondering if this will clearly bypass it. D:

Eternal. - March 27, 2014, 7:53 pm

Yes, but I could offer you a much better alternative for this issue than a VPN. Sending you a PM.

Internap - March 28, 2014, 5:15 am

Why is the client detected 15/40? Also to test if after I ran it on a VM and it didn't execute at all. Just curious for an answer here?

Because the client is encrypted to hide the source code.

Were glad to hear that our customers are able to use the VPN smoothly within their first time using it.

Lifetime packages are the best offer, they're cheap, and who knows when we wont offer them anymore.

Eternal. - March 30, 2014, 2:03 pm

I am thinking about removing lifetime and adding some more features, so probably soon. HF members are the only one's who buy lifetime anyways. Most people from other sources purchase Quarterly or yearly, not sure why.

TehPirate - March 31, 2014, 3:08 pm

I'm very close to clicking the purchase button for a Lifetime open port account. But I'm curious how long you plan on seeing this service last? As the lifetime is the lifetime of the service, correct?

macowa - March 31, 2014, 3:18 pm

Lifetime of the product, that is correct. I have no intention of bringing this down anytime soon, only expanding.

No, they are not down. Make sure you are using the password for the VPN and not the website, also, make a ticket next time as this is not a support thread. We have a ticket system for a reason, and you can PM me here as well.

Vouch for the service. Had a lil snag at first with the client due to a OpenVPN conflic with Tap, idk why, but managed to fix it and got it up and running quickly.

Glad you were able to figure it out. There are guides in the knowledgebase if you ever have issues again, and TAP is easy because you can install it from within the client.

Yes, usually VPN's do this due to encrypting your traffic and distance from the server. But they are high speed servers so it shouldn't be by much.

Why when I uploaded this to virustotal it says it has a virus.

<https://www.virustotal.com/en/file/fc0889f46d5fd775594a370443177f62ae842bffe37c31f450ac144d8d314d9a/analysis/1397519514/> that Trojan.PWS.Spy.11887 surprises me the most.

Also why does this prevent you from using it in a sandboxie? Why does it prevent you from going on www.virustotal.com once it's installed? (I had to go to my other computer to go to virustotal). When I tried to go on virustotal on my other computer I had your VPN installed on, it says the webpage is unavailable. Also I went on your terms of service, read them closely, and apparently they log a timestamp of your ip address (connected time and ending time). I could be mistaken but this service seems so fishy. I'm not trying to be a sales trasher, but I could be wrong on some things.

It's encrypted so no one can see the source code. Why you think it blocks Virus Total is beyond me, as it does not, nor is it blocked by SandBoxie. You must have downloaded something at the same time that is causing issues for you. Anyone who wants to verify I haven't changed the files on the server, and want to see it run in Sandboxie as well as open on Virus total are free to request it, or test for themselves.

This VPN client is legit. I was the one who tested it and analyzed it in a secured VM to see if it was backdoored or not and it's not. If you are concerned about the security of your computer after using 143VPN, I can come over Teamviewer and do a check-up to see if you are not infected with another malware causing these issues. On my end, 143VPN is legit and clean, not infected at all.

Keeping yourself anonymous. We do not keep logs. We do not allow torrenting on US servers. If you do this, we will shut down the server. If you need something for torrenting PM me and I can help you.

?Gohan - May 6, 2014, 1:17 pm

All ports can be opened, besides port 80. Each port can only have one connection at a time, so if someone is using it, you'll have to select a different port.

The VPN does work with Xbox Live. We have a guide in our knowledge base on how to set the VPN up with xbox live. Hope this helps.

Then I'll pass, there's no point of open ports for Xbl if you can't have them all open. I'll stick with my nVPN atm, thanks anyway.

You can do it within the client or by going into your network options. Right click network, go to properties and delete the Tap driver. Then reinstall from the client or the best way is to install OpenVPN itself.

Enter cmd in the Start menu search field.

Right-click on Command Prompt and select Run as Administrator.

Type the following command and press Enter: ipconfig /flushdns

The client isn't infected. We have ad many people on HF claim this and it has been tested by Aura several times. Unzipping a file wouldn't cause any issues on your system, even if it were infected.

The traffic from running it would be from the update server.

This is not a support thread. IP test is wrong, not sure why it didn't update, I will have to talk to the developer of the client about that. Switzerland seems to have been nulled due to a ddos attack, but other than that everything is working. Make sure you only have one TAP driver installed or they will interfere.

Exact same thing happens to me. It's preventing me from using the service

Eternal. - June 13, 2014, 2:21 pm

Someone is Ddosing our website, which is why it is down. Several members were suspended as a precautionary measure yesterday as someone has been using our VPN to try to bruteforce into company servers and we have received complaints about it. We suspended anyone who was connected to the UK server, suspension reason: Please open a ticket. I wanted to address the issue before it became a bigger problem by talking to everyone I suspended, but the website being attacked is preventing me from doing so.

Troye - June 13, 2014, 2:50 pm

The site is back online, but is running a bit slower than usual as we mitigate the Ddos attack

Just bought a lifetime account yesterday and very happy with the service. lot of servers to select from and the app itself is very good. uptime was great and connectivity was excellent. I think it's the best vpn currently being offered at HF.

Now, the only problem i'm having is with port open error. I'm opening the port through another app and even listening to TCP port using Listen file (i.e. included in downloads) and adding the port to it. But when i go to canyouseeme or any other site to check the port, it says port is closed. and clients aren't connecting because of this closed port.

Can you please help me in that?

Bought this for port forwarding and this is confusing and making me overwhelmed. I don't really like the UI, like it could be BIGGER and like not so dark (then again, tons of other products on HF also have a dark UI)

I need help with the port forwarding. How do I do it? Do I first connect to let's say Russia server, get the IP and then set up the port? Then I would set up freedns to reroute to the said IP and set my programs to listen to the port i opened? is that all?

Cause I cant connect to russia server, in fact I cant connect to any server that has ports, i can connect to NY server perfectly though. This so far is a bad experience for me.

Did you read the setup information guide? Did you check the knowledgebase?

<http://143vpn.com/knowledgebase.php>

If you do not like the UI you can use the OpenVPN GUI here:

<https://openvpn.net/index.php/open-source/downloads.html>

And use these files: <http://143vpn.com/downloads/OpenVPNFiles.zip>

You can port forward here or in the GUI: 143VPN.com/panel

Our routing tool is for accessing websites without using the VPNs IP address. Not for DNS. Also, yes you would have to listen to the port.

Double A - August 19, 2014, 8:15 pm

Here is an honest review.

I bought this for Dark Comet because of port forwarding. Well I couldnt figure it out at all.

But that isnt the issue here (its part of it) the issue is that the VPN doesnt seem to work well for me. A small list of problems

It doesnt connect to servers. Says stuff like initialization sequence completed but with errors, Passwords may be cached turn off auto some crap to prevent this, THIS <https://i.imgur.com/Q4pPmpm.png> , and some other errors that I forgot about.

Now when it DOES connect, it works OKAY. The speeds arent consistent. They sometimes match your maximum internet speed and sometimes it just stop works all together.

<https://i.imgur.com/PlsJU93.png> tested on testmy.net accurate results and records everything. The speed became horrible during the test itself!

I PMed Eternal regarding all the errors and the fact that they probably didnt bother testing/optimizing it for Windows 8.1 and that I would like a refund cause lets face it, whats the point in having a lifetime license for a VPN if I wont even use the VPN due to it not even working.

I also had a problem where the "add route" command was totally ignored for Hackforums when trying to use the VPN. I would much rather stick to [censored] 5.

I am highly disappointed in this VPN and there are other things that I didnt even mention above such as slow connecting times, "repair connection" not working and ending up breaking my connection where I had to go and use Microsoft trouble shooter to fix my connection, when checking servers if they are live or not it CRASHES the program, and you cant copy things in the "Log" unless you are quick as it always automatically moves to the bottom (the thing you see when you are typing) and deselects everything, and you cant even do CTRL A which is a hassle.

This VPN, out of 10, get a 2 star rating. Why 2 stars? It sucks, well from my experience, and it at least WORKED... for a while and then had speed and connectivity issues. 2 for effort.

BiH - August 19, 2014, 8:17 pm

also his " no logs " is bullshit
i will only be smart for one comment.

Most anonymizing services who claim that they "don't keep logs" actually do keep logs, because otherwise they would be in even deeper trouble when the Feds drop on them at 6:00 AM with terrorism charges. A VPN service like the ones you quote is basically saying: "yeah, we accept to take full legal responsibility for everything you do online for only 2$ per month". Does this really sound... plausible ?

Also, paying involves transactions, and transactions include logs. Everywhere. To a large extent, stolen credit card information mitigates the risks of being caught through these logs, but add extra risks (i.e. there is now credit card fraud, and this enlists some other three-letter agencies in the pursuit of the perpetrator).

In other words, they log that user X (identified by his account information and client IP address) used VPN endpoint V from time T1 to time T2.

Now suppose the authorities want to know who did something, and they know that the culprit was coming from V at time T. They will ask the VPN provider, who can tell them which user was using V at that time.

A VPN only provides one level of insulation between the user's identity and the services that the user accesses. In a situation where law enforcement becomes involved, that's not much. If anonymity can be achieved at all, it requires using multiple hops, preferably in as many different jurisdictions as possible.

VPN.

Thanks for replying!also there are some companies ;)

If you do any attacking in that session, have any identifying data persist from the non-VPN to VPN session (or vice versa) such as a cookie of any type or browser settings data, or a user name (IIRC one of the Anonymous busts was from a single non-VPN login to IRC) investigators can connect your VPN activity to you even if it really is as opaque as the marketing promises claim.

Like I've stated in the comment section, you can never be sure that your VPN provider doesn't log any information that could be leaked to the government or any party that has enough power.

Another way to use a VPN would be to rent a VPS and setup your own VPN service on it. However, you would need to make payments by a prepaid credit card and not provide any personal information.

Keep in mind that this solution might still not be perfectly anonymous, unless you never divulge your information when you connect to your VPS (IP, location, etc.)

As I said, if you are having issues with the client use the OpenVPN client. You clearly do not know how to setup a VPN, or even how to read links I give you to help you out. The route addition connects to your CMD, and if that doesn't work to add a route that means you most likely didn't run the client as admin. If you did and it still doesn't work there is a knowledgebase article on how to do it manually. The knowledgebase would have solved all of your issues if you would have looked at it.

In the setup instructions and on the knowledgebase there are instructions on using the native OpenVPN client with our files.

Download this: <https://openvpn.net/index.php/open-source/downloads.html>

Download and use these files: <http://143vpn.com/downloads/OpenVPNFiles.zip>

Also the client issue is usually fixed by updating Windows.

You sent me a ticket, I answered. We are not affiliated with HF and had nothing to do with your ban. The reason you had an auth error is because I had just restarted the auth server.

You most likely are using the password to login to the website not the VPN, and don't have the latest .NET installation.

Replied, thank you for choosing 143VPN.

grosseteub - October 8, 2014, 12:53 pm after purchase and get activated , here is my review ofn 143 vpn :

-Firstable and maybe the more important think , Eternel is a nice person who gives fast replies and quick help :)
the vpn works really well , many available location from all around the world , abaility to port forward in 3 seconds with ease , very nice design client , openVPN technology and the routing fnction is realy amazing , i was bored to disconnect my vpn only for hackforums (as omni ban proxies and vpn's) , now i can stay connected with the slected server and add an exception for hackforums.net or any others sites who don't allow vpn)

so of course it is a big vouch for eternal and his VPN service , i only have a simple question , is it a dedicated ip plan ? because i am asking , if is a shared plan , if it won't cause some troubles for ratting to receive slaves connection

thanks again for this great service
My best regards

I just bought it and got it running, looks good thanks for that.

One thing I may would recommend. On the first upate the serverlist didn't just show the correct servers so I had to remove them manually in the config dir in order to just show the working ones. A function for clearing the configurations while updating would be a good thing.

I now wrote a .bat file in order to do that.

You have to port forward on each server individually. You will know what ports you opened because you opened them, and when you are connected to canyouseeme.org it automatically gets the ip of the server you are connected to.

Canada is being restarted, will be up shortly.

This is my personal review on this VPN.

I am disappointed of this VPN. As i bought NanoCore and CyberSeal from sticky threads, so did i with this vpn.

My expectations were :easy install, easy use and port for NanoCore.

As i bought it i got via e-mail all the needed files. I downloaded them and placed them as in the "Readme". From all the server countries only with the U.K. i could even surf on the internet. Others didn't connect at all, and others, if did, kept my original ip so..lol. Also at port forwarding, only 2 or 3 servers were working for me.

I did search some video/topic tutorials but didn't find anything, just a 9 months old video.

I bought it yesterday night, didn't use it even one day. Now when i enter the vpn, the servers don't even load, looks like it doesn't connect to their server.

Also I think it may have a conflict with NanoCore, making it crash.(won't give details about that yet). I am using Windows 8.1 with all updates up to date.

I did send a pm to owner due my problems and also send a ticket. This didn't help.

I would like a refund, since i bought the life time package and my expectations were high. I still hope that in future it will be better. I am waiting now for you reply.

I asked you a question and you never replied. You said you were getting an error on my website, I asked on which server the error was coming from.

If Nanocore is crashing, I don't know how that has anything to do with OpenVPN. Also, we are not affiliated with NanoCore.

We were having an issue with Russia, which I have fixed. Perhaps you were talking about that?

Hi Raluca,

Just helping an old buddy out here, let's start with your problems:

Code Others didn't connect at all, and others, if did, kept my original ip so..lol.

The most common problem when the users IP does not change is when the TAP driver is misconfigured on the server, either the server rejects it completely OR some server firewalls let you through BUT your network configurations are not updated. Perhaps you did not update your Tap Driver when you installed the client?

I suggest you download the OFFICIAL 143 VPN client if you have not so already and follow the instructions provided in the readme.

Code Also at port forwarding, only 2 or 3 servers were working for me.

Sometimes a firewall will block a user (especially Linux Servers) if they send too many requests, perhaps the server was busy handling loads when you sent in the request and you sent it in multiple times? Causing the server IPTables to block you completely.

I'm sure Eternal can assist you if you contact him through the suggested methods, I'm 100% certain about that. He also has lots of support staff working so it's not possible for your ticket to be left unanswered.

Support is always here to help. There shouldn't be any problem if you're "account" has been inactive. As long as it had been paid monthly, or you have the lifetime. Is there an error in your login?

It was not a driver TAP problems. After none of the servers were working, an update was done and most of them were working. It is too bad that it doesn't have a real time "online -check" to know which one is working without trying them all.

This is why you use a DNS, so that it's easy if your vpn has a dynamic ip.

(Oct 30, 2014 06:46 PM)YOLOnline Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Can I point my slaves to this VPN (ip)?

Yes you can but there are 2 problem

If server gets replace then you will lose your slaves

If you don't use DNS then other VPN clients can see your victims(if you don't use a uncommon port.)

(Oct 30, 2014 06:46 PM)YOLOnline Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Will the IPs be changed?

No until Eternal buy a new server and replace the current one.

So it's better to get a DNS i suggest FreeDNS.

Eternal. - October 31, 2014, 6:11 am

Use DNS if you want to do that as Lalit said. I do not guarantee anything when it comes to IP addresses. People abuse the servers, and the servers need to be replaced. IP addresses get banned and need to be replaced.

Oddly enough Bitdefender classifies your webpage as malware. Not trying to bash but just thought you might want to know.

Strange, I will look into it. Nod32 and others do not, wonder why Bitdefender does.

Responded. Your issue is one I have never seen before personally, nor has anyone ever reported an issue like this. If you can give me details in a PM that would be great.

TehPirate - November 8, 2014, 5:32 pm

Purchased towards beginning Summer, and still very satisfied with this VPN service.
Only complaint I've had is related to the UI, just reading errors (ovpn files and account details).
From my understanding, it revolves around my AV doing a quick scan of the folder. Also I've had compatibility issues with Windows 10. Yes, it's still in beta, just pointing it out. Keep up the service!

Brian Cook - November 12, 2014, 11:20 am

Purchased this over a year ago with 0 problems. Talked to the guy on skype previously as well. I had 1 issue which I got resolved pretty quickly.

I purchased a new lifetime subscription recently, I believe I'm having an issue with an incorrect login combination that their system gave me the wrong password for the client or didnt actually create my account, which takes less than 2 minutes to add but here I am almost a week later and no response from support team and private messaged him and he tells me he doesnt use skype, which is a lie...because I spoke to him on it before.

Is the entire service being maintained the past few days? I seen an update for the 6th, but it's now the 12th.

No new updates.

Someone else confirm it's working?

If so, it's definitely an account problem on 143's side that an admin can fix in a jiffy.

The service has been maintained. I do not use Skype for support, you have a much better chance of getting a hold of me quicker via PM a support ticket because if I am logged into Skype it is usually for a specific purpose that I am required for and Skype is my only option for certain group chats. I apologize if I offended you.

I answered your support ticket. Because you ordered another service on the same account, the system automatically made your username have a "1" at the end of your email. The password given to you is correct, the username was not.

The support ticket you sent to me was opened today. There are no tickets from a week ago for your account, perhaps you sent an email to us? Not sure why I didn't receive the ticket but there isn't one.

Brian Cook - November 12, 2014, 12:26 pm

One more thing, I noticed about the double account thing and one of the screenshots(or mightve been text im not 100% sure) I seen with xx@xxxx.xx"2"

I did try adding a 2 to my e-mail(username), but it was a 1 as you said(which i didnt try), if that screenshot or text had a 1 on it instead of a 2, i wouldve tried that and my problem wouldve been solved.

for future customers sakes, please change the 2 to a 1, so they can try this step and won't have to wait as long as i did (which im not highly upset about) maybe make a quick picture or section in the knowledgebase informing customers this is a known problem edit: i found out about the xx@xx.xx2 via another thread, not from your website

The only way that xx@xx.xx2 would happen is if they had 3 services with us, and xx@xx.xx1 had been cancelled and they purchased a new service entirely.

Due to excessive ports being opened, we've gone ahead and reset all open ports. This means that you will need to re-open any ports you had open. If you receive an error when port forwarding, that means the port is already open, if not, you've successfully opened it. If you cannot connect, then the issue is most likely your firewall or antivirus being enabled.

Hello guys, I bought this vpn subscription about 10 hours ago and transaction was confirmed. Does anyone know how long will be my account in pending state until I get login credentials?

?SafranUSA - December 21, 2014, 3:54 pm

Can i know why 143VPN Client is detected by all my antivirus ? Also, the client take around 75% of my CPU all the time and i tried with different network/computer.

Are you hosting a Bitcoin miner or something in your client ?

If somebody with some good knowledge can scan 143Client mp me.

Because it is an encrypted OpenVPN container. If you do not wish to use our client due to it being marked as a false positive, you can download and install the OpenVPN client here:

<https://openvpn.net/index.php/open-source/downloads.html>

Here are the files for OpenVPN's client: <http://143vpn.com/downloads/OpenVPNFiles.zip>

If you run it in Sandboxie you will see no foreign processes such as a botnet or a bitcoin miner.

Your invoice has been marked as paid.

Also, UK has been removed for copyright infringement. Do not use 143VPN for torrenting, if you need to torrent I can help you in a much more efficient way than a VPN.

We have the ability to open ports, however we do not allow more than one account at a time on the same port which is why 1604 is closed for you. Other times if it is not working it could be because other reasons such as abuse which I can find out pretty quickly, but this was the case here.

Make sure you do not have anything blocking your ports. I recommend disabling all start up programs and trying again. If this does not solve your issue you may have a hardware block. This can happen at certain schools and corporate offices, but are rare.

We changed hosting for our website, not the VPN. However you should use DNS products such as No-IP to insure you do not lose access to what you need, we are not responsible for anything you lose and IPs can be changed at anytime if an IP is blacklisted for spam.

Both use the OpenVPN protocol, so they are similar in that regard. As far as Port forwarding, I have never used their panel and I don't know if they even have a panel.

They may require you to send them a ticket for port forwarding whereas we give you a panel to do it yourself.

Charged twice? Did you buy the lifetime one? If so, you should have been charged once for lifetime.

To find the correct credentials to use for your VPN, follow these steps.

1. Head over to <http://order.143vpn.com/> and login with the account YOU made to order.
2. On the right, click on "Services".

3. From there, you will see what package you bought. Click "View Details" next to the "Active" status.

4. Go to the "Change Password" tab.

5. You will see something like this.

"Username/Password youraccount@email.com / PasswordHere"

That's the credentials you login with the VPN client. Your credentials to log in to the site and the VPN are different.

What you should do is try another server, and report the specific server you are having this issue with in a support ticket. Your issue can happen due to ip addresses being banned, and we have to renew them due to spammers etc.

I'm going to refer you to the post above. Some servers have been removed. Try using other servers.

Eternal. - February 3, 2015, 6:47 pm

Someone heavily abused our network and we lost a few servers because of IP bans. We have mitigated the issue and will be bringing the servers back shortly.

Thank you for your cooperation.

Aurora - February 4, 2015, 3:06 pm

New servers will be brought in shortly. You may notice a lack of servers for the time being, but give us a day or two, and you'll see a change. Any problems can be directed towards me.

Next time you experience this, make a support ticket. Some of the servers were under attack recently and that may have caused it due to high traffic.

This is an issue some users have, usually it is connected to driver issues with Windows such as .Net not being up to date.

Install Open VPN from here:

<http://swupdate.openvpn.org/community/releases/openvpn-install-2.3.2-I003-i686.exe>

Download VPN files here: <http://143vpn.com/downloads/OpenVPNFiles.zip>

Add files to: C:\Program Files (x86)\OpenVPN\config

Then login and run.

You can then port forward from 143vpn.com/panel

Has anyone else been having problems with reliability on US servers?? I'm not attacking 143vpn, when the Chicago, New York serves are working properly they are smoking. Full 55mbps!

However, I always have my desktop connected to vpn when it is on. Usually there is nothing critical going on but I like a secure line. Anyways, I rarely had any trouble when I used to connect to Canadian servers for long amounts of time. I just don't like the thought of my VPN dying when I have services running that I usually only run over VPN..

Any input? Would I benefit from using the OpenVPN client vs the 143 custom client? Is anyone have connection issues on certain servers? I do have addon software for OpenVPN client that will kill all internet connections if the VPN dies. But I digress..

What are your thoughts?

The program no longer works? Do me a favor and delete those files.

Go here: <http://143vpn.com/downloads/>
Download the '143VPN Client' and try to log in again.

If it fails, please let me know.

Amazing VPN! Fastest one I've encounterd so far I even use it to play on servers :)

Don't hesitate to buy as this is one of the best out there!

Also can you add a feature so that you can allow the VPN on only certain programs?

Example: I'm downloading something on filezilla but I need the vpn to go online, I wanna stop filezilla from using the vpn and use my regular internet.

If you can do that'll be great!

If the IP is showing up from somewhere other than where you expected do some research. I mean by that, use more than one site to check the IP. Many of our IPs have previous owners, and have been registered elsewhere. It takes time for the ip registration to be updated on many sites. Our servers are where they say they are, we have no reason to lie about our server location or products.

If you have any questions please ask.

I had some issues getting mine to work at first, and I figured out that you had to run the 143vpn client (you dont have to log into this) as well as the OpenVPN client (which you do need to submit login info to) for it to connect. Both need to be running for me to login to a server.

Any VPN on HF that uses a Canadian location and claims no logs is A. Full of shit, or B. Unaware of the heavy fines that will be incurred as a result of breaking their new law which requires all VPN customers to be monitored for 6 months.

Because we do not keep logs, and because of this law, we will not add a Canadian location.

I'm actually quite shocked at how well this VPN runs.

My home internet speed: Max of 2Mbps.

Connecting to: LA, USA (DDoS Protected)

Ability to: have all my internet-using applications open, and watch Netflix [HD] with no problems.

Until I experience a problem, this VPN has my vouch and I r8 it 8/8 (so, 10/10).

Fixing WebRTC and DNS IP leak issues the right way

TUTORIAL: For Looka and anyone else interested.

WebRTC and Firefox config

This is something you fix on your end.. To my knowledge there is no way for a provider to fix this..
Install this in firefox.

<https://addons.mozilla.org/en-US/firefox/addon/happy-bonobo-disable-webrtc/?src=api> There is no equivalent for chrome no matter what anyone says(the chrome extension flat doesn't work). Also, manually disable webrtc in Firefox setting via URL bar.

<http://forums.mozillazine.org/viewtopic.php?f=38&t=2722151> Might not be necessary with the addon but I know that just disabling webrtc in firefox WILL NOT stop your webrtc leak. For me it required addon and disable.

Install DNSCrypt

Lookup and download DNSCrypt; install it locally as a service/enable startup and change your DNS to localhost eg. 127.0.0.1. Ideally, you could install DNSCrypt on your machine and your router(install on router to boost home network security, not essential at all to fixing your webrtc issue/dns leak on specific machine). DNSCrypt can be tricky at first but if you have any problems I can walk you through it in a breeze.

NOTE: When setting DNS to localhost make sure to disable IPv6. It's not needed at all and will mess things up.

<https://github.com/jedisct1/dnscrypt-proxy/blob/master/README-WINDOWS.markdown>

Download or git, rar, save to directory where it won't get deleted and follow the instructions on that github page. Don't use the crap autoinstaller. Atleast I had problems with it.

This will fix your problems I guarantee. You should be able to google and find out any questions. If you have any problems I can help.

Testing

If all is successful.. Go to <http://ipleak.net> and your webrtc and DNS should look similar to mine SEE BELOW. Linode in Georgia is my DNSCrypt dns server. This is because I use okTurtles for DNSCrypt. If I wasn't connected to VPN it would show ONLY Linode. All the Google entries must be DNS servers used by the 143vpn servers. But my machine I am certain is using Linode to process my dns request.

Now.. Comcast, charter, cox, google, att, etc cannot query your internet usage based on a blanket list of DNS addresses. Also your DNS request startpoint will show the location of the VPN and NOT your home address (aka: exactly what a dns leak is).

You now have completely solved any IP/DNS leak and security concerns. It is almost impossible with DNS crypt to determine what someone was viewing on a specific server, reverse dns someone on shared hosting, DNS block a specific subnet, and vulnerabilities that attack ssl like heartbleed are irrelevant. And with firefox configured correctly you are assure that you have no need to worry about any sort of IP leak due to webrtc, or any leak I am aware of. And currently none are being discussed, security experts had thought for years that webrtc could be vulnerable. You can also tell that in the pic my browser is not leaking WebRTC detection!

Wish you the best! This was an important security concern to me after the discovery of hearbleed and the webrtc vulnerability and I spent some time figuring it out as well I could. I think this is the best possible way to solve your problems!

My IPLeak.net results connected to 143vpn LA server. ???

PS.. I know I went beyond what you were asking but I was just trying to share some knowledge that might help. This may be basic for you, maybe not. I thought you and others could find this info useful.

PS.. I know that picture says Michigan and not LA but if you check the IP on infosniper.net it definitely comes back as LA. Don't know why this is. But ipleak.net is a reputable and quality site that I consider very trustworthy!

Long live 143vpn!! ???

How did you install the TAP adapter?

If you used the client, that has never personally worked for me. I always install OpenVPN regularly.

Also, which server are you using?

You cannot use a VPN as a proxy, however you can buy a proxy from another provider such as Torguard.

Placed order, few seconds later it was processed.

Automatically got added etc, easy to use.

I'll test later this evening if I can portforward etc.

Appears to be fast and steady.

Only minority is that the custom client does not support DPI scaling, but still usable, not really an issue.

Same here, scanned on two different sites.

I do notice Kazy, isn't that a false alert because it's not official software or something like that?

Sometimes it does use a lot of CPU power

<https://gyazo.com/4679ed3f75f435277f4bf05eeba4b7af>

Edit: Only happens when opening a port through the client, I guess that's just a bug :). A restart fixes it.

wtf?

Its a false positive, you can use the OpenVPN client if you do not trust it. Instructions are in the knowledgebase and setup email on how to do this. The program is encrypted, and has been analyzed by many people over the years and no one has found anything suspicious. Run it on Sandboxie and see for yourself.

by the way thanks for your fast reply

We have a monthly plan and a lifetime plan. There's currently a 60% discount code for the lifetime package. Instead of paying $50 for lifetime, you can now purchase our lifetime package for only $20 using the code: C2WX3YTN23

Setup is quite easy. Once you have purchased a plan, instructions regarding setup will be sent to you through the email you used to sign up. If any confusion arises, you can open a ticket with your problem, and we'll respond back with a solution.

EDIT DOWN

YES i did. They will answer me later but i need this now. I have problems when i have to use this. Always AUTH FAILED ;/

This means you are using the wrong username or password.

Usually happens when incorrect user details are entered. Make sure you are using the credentials from the email.

Its a false positive. If you don't wish to use our client use the OpenVPN client.

Yes, it's a false positive. Don't worry. There will be a new and revamped client in the future so that this won't happen again. In the mean time, you can still use that client or use OpenVPN.

Yes it works on linux. I download the config files and then run through command line via terminal.
Ex. openvpn openvpn_config_file.opvn

Like Eternal had said, our mail server isn't cooperating with us at the moment. We're doing our best to fix it.

This happens when your computers DPI is set above 100%, the only way to fix it is to set your DPI at the default 100%. If you would like to use the OpenVPN client instead follow these instructions:

Install Open VPN from here:

<http://swupdate.openvpn.org/community/releases/openvpn-install-2.3.2-I003-i686.exe>

Download VPN files here: <http://143vpn.com/downloads/OpenVPNFiles.zip>

Add files to: C:\Program Files (x86)\OpenVPN\config

Then login and run.

You can then port forward from 143vpn.com/panel
