That's the worst thing you could do, basically the stub will get detected as hell in a couple of days...AV companies just need the sample and then it's a matter of hours.

Seen a copy of this, and it is PERFECT for anyone that would like to play around with this type of software. Luca has made it simple but working, so if you honestly wanted to, you could slap Net Seal on it and sell it right now. Big vouch. :)

At least get something better to say when you're ing it 4 consecutive times. I think the GUI is poorly designed and is very sloppy. Needs a lot of cleaning up. Btw what framework does this rely on seeing as it's VB.NET?

The central thing isn't the GUI is the code anyway a user can change the GUI , what you mean "Btw what framework does this rely on seeing as it's VB.NET?" ?

Yeah but it may have helped sell if the forms already had a decent GUI on them. And what version of the .NET framework must the stub have in order to run? E.g 2.0, 3.5, 3.5 Client Profile, 4.0, 4.5 etc.

You should state that in the OP then. The higher the framework, the less machines the stub will be able to run on.
