Dennse - December 30, 2013, 3:41 pm

According to their tweets, they've taken down a whole datacenter in NY. Can anyone confirm that?

.TheMarv - December 30, 2013, 3:47 pm

I can't confirm that they've taken down the datacenter, but they took down EA and League etc. so I think so

Dennse - December 30, 2013, 3:49 pm

Lol, a guy on Facebook just posted that they're 'just using a botnet and doing simple DDoS'.

Ok guys, heres what happened:

Wanted to have a Party of "LeagueOfLegendz" with some friends yesterday night (no, i am not a usual gamer), we all got home early for this and looked forward for a 6 hours of great Battles... after first round of warmup then it happened - our connection to League timed out.

Not knowing whats going on, we waited for LOL to come back up again, but nothing changed. So i went to LOL Forums to lookup the service statz, and there allready was a thread about it, saying they're having technical issues with the EU and NA Servers. The thread had allready a thousand pages, and on one page i saw a guy, linking to this twitter profile:

<http://www.twitter.com/DerpTrolling>

And indeed, it was dem guys who seemed to cause the Problems, while attacking the League Login Servers. Also, they seemed to use some int(rnd) streamer guy called "PhantomL0rd" as voice to the raging LOL crowd... the Viewrates of his channel increased from a 3k at beginning, up to 100k after 2 hours, as every League Gamer wanted to keep up to date about whats going on.

So the Derp guys opened a chat window to PhantomL0rd, which he streamed to the public.

THEN...

the Derp guys forced PhantomL0rd to play a game of Dota2 - if he wins it then everything is fine, but if he loses, Dota2 will go offline worldwide.
Under heavy pressure of the Dota2 Community and the 100k viewers of his stream, he played the game of Dota2... and lost it :D !! Only a minute later Dota2 was offline and not playable anymore, even whole steam seemed to have some login problems for around 20 minutes.

In meanwhile they also took down: EA Games and CoD Servers, Blizzard and WoW Servers, Battle.net also as ClubPenguin (dunno whats dat) and Valve for some short time.

hotmail.com #offline ...

After taking down Dota2, the Derp guys came back online in chat again with PhantomL0rd, and 4 or 5 of their team members introduced themselves with their realvoice, saying "hi" to the stream watchers... one of them sounded like 14 - 16, the rest like 18 up to 26, one of them introduced himself as "Who? here" - i personally think it was the Who? we once had here at HF for nearly a year of time until he got banned with the Root Group.... it could have been him, but thats just what i think personally.

..then, one of them wrote: hotmail.com #offline

I didn't believe, so i went to hotmail.com.... to find it beeing timed out !!! Also, the PhantomL0rd guy tried to open hotmail.com - but got a timeout!

So just to get that clear,- they took down Microsofts hotmail Service !!!

(But stopped the attack again after 2 minutes of time, i think because they feared some >real< big trouble if continuing ?

Over the night, the Derp guys went on and took down the complete internet of NorthKorea. Also i figured out, that it was not the LeagueOfLegendz Login Servers they took down, no,- they took down the complete Internet Provider of the LOL Servers, a firm called "Internap" - i bet that it the stuff you guys mean with the Datacenter or Node that beeing taken down at Chicago/NY.

All in all, these guys heavily reminded me on lulz-sec, and they seem to already plan something bigger again for tonight - we'll see ;)

I like the way these guys make fun, that show they pulled off with PhantomL0rd made my evening, eventhough i missed the Party of LOL,
in the end the Derp guys we're more fun :3

And before the people here start raging:

Yes, i know there are a lot of people on HF who will think thats nothing special and rate dem Derp guys as skidds - but think of what big power their Lazerz haz,- this is nothing you can archive with a small 20k Botnet or a few hundred shelled servers - these guys actually seem to have real big power which they have proofed yesterday evening...

From my point of view, these guys have my respects!

Looking forward for more trolling of them, but not for tonight, i will turn of comp now and make my way into the new year 2014...

happy new year folks... stay safe! ?

EDIT: They just took down Runescape, lawl ^^
