

Forum:Hack Forums

Thread: [&\[b\]#34\[/b\];Opulent Design's Portfolio&\[b\]#34\[/b\]; | Web Design | Might Code](#)

Sunkist S0D4 - December 30, 2013, 4:43 pm

Spoiler (Click to View)

I'm debating ether to create a new one, or use this one to code it onto a framework. Anyways please leave some constructive criticism down below. ?

? THEINsPIREDONE - December 30, 2013, 4:57 pm

What is it with you people and the big text? Isn't 14pt text working for you?

Big text, especially in the main body is so ugly and annoying...
How can you use small text in the nav-bar and double-sized text in the main content?

Shrink the text down mate...

You've made a good color selection though.

One more thing to notice is the style you've used. The whole template is built and designed into flat-design style, but the buttons "Read More" are designed into Web 2.0 style. That's a bad execution there!

Good luck!

bshades - December 30, 2013, 5:01 pm

Yeah i'm from dutch I like this to much,
But me english not enough for understand this :P!

Bad Meets Evil - December 31, 2013, 12:38 am

Yeah it is an odd blend of styles and the typography is lacking.

Aired - December 31, 2013, 8:00 am

(Dec 30, 2013 05:57 PM)TheInspiredOne Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) One more thing to notice is the style you've used. The whole template is built and designed into flat-design style, but the buttons "Read More" are designed into Web 2.0 style. That's a bad execution there!

Since when is this a flat design? I see too many shadows in the design for it to be called a flat website. Even if it were, what's wrong with combining both trends together? I see plenty of professional designers incorporating some shadows into their buttons and it transitions quite smoothly.

To OP: I've realized over the months giving feedback to you, that you seem not to appreciate feedback and more towards defending yourself and your decisions, so I sense I'm not going to waste any more time with you.

I cannot take you seriously when you do not at least include pictures in the blank work boxes, because it gives off an impression you spent very little time on this design. So next time, include some sample works, even if it's not yours. It makes your website look better.[/u]/[b]

Sunkist S0D4 - December 31, 2013, 9:59 am

(Dec 31, 2013 09:00 AM)Aired Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Since when is this a flat design? I see too many shadows in the design for it to be called a flat website. Even if it were, what's wrong with combining both trends together? I see plenty of professional designers incorporating some shadows into their buttons and it transitions quite smoothly.

To OP: I've realized over the months giving feedback to you, that you seem not to appreciate feedback and more towards defending yourself and your decisions, so I sense I'm not going to waste any more time with you.

I cannot take you seriously when you do not at least include pictures in the blank work boxes, because it gives off an impression you spent very little time on this design. So next time, include some sample works, even if it's not yours. It makes your website look better.[/u]/[b]

I appreciate every little comment or feedback, I will fill in the blanks, work on the read more buttons, and even play with the typography in the middle section. Give me time man, I don't even have the time to reply! But no I understand where you guys are going, take it easy man. Like I said I appreciate the feedback im not a n00b who cries and complain your flaming hahaha. At least my thread didn't get buried like the past. To everyone who replied your feed back is respected and will be taken into consideration for an updated version! It only helps me get better! ?

Version two

Spoiler \(Click to View\)

Error503 - March 5, 2014, 8:26 am

How much would you charge for a web portfolio site?

reama - March 5, 2014, 8:27 am

I might let you design my website when it's finished.

Graffworld - March 5, 2014, 9:10 am

(Dec 30, 2013 05:57 PM)TheInspiredOne Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) What is it with you people and the big text? Isn't 14pt text working for you?

Big text, especially in the main body is so ugly and annoying...

How can you use small text in the nav-bar and double-sized text in the main content?

Shrink the text down mate...

You've made a good color selection though.

One more thing to notice is the style you've used. The whole template is built and designed into flat-design style, but the buttons "Read More" are designed into Web 2.0 style. That's a bad execution there!

Good luck!

Noooooooo. Smaller text is horrible for today's web standards. If that's your personal preference, that's fine, but don't outrule text bigger than 14px nor 14pt because of functionality.

goldenarms_ - March 5, 2014, 9:26 am

Man this is #bad. Text is so big, tagline is #bad. Glow line tab things under the menu text so bad.

Sunkist S0D4 - March 5, 2014, 12:14 pm

(Mar 5, 2014 10:26 AM)Self Made Wrote: CITE Man this is #bad. Text is so big, tagline is #bad. Glow line tab things under the menu text so bad.

Its also old bro, my actual first web design concept. ?

Scratch that, one of my first. You have to start somewhere am I right?