Thread: Happy New Year Breach!

Omniscient - January 1, 2014, 5:29 pm

Happy New Year everyone. I had a great time this week and for New Years I was at a private party even with Katy Perry as the entertainment. It was awesome. The wife and I had a blast and it was just a magical night full of good food, friends, and the welcoming of a new year. I hope everyone experienced something similar.

Now for the lowdown.

First off...member data was in no way compromised. Not even close. They think they got something they don't really have. So don't be fooled by screenshots or bullshit. Your data wasn't taken or accessed in any ways.

So today while having a late breakfast I got some emails about access to accounts and password resets. These security triggers alerted me pretty quickly that I had a compromise. A follow up email was sent to me threatening me to ban Orgy or else. This was about 12:30pm PST give or take 10 mins. Initially I wasn't sure what was accessed and unfortunately I only had phone access at my location. But within 30 minutes it was clear I had a breach that needed immediate attention.

I left my breakfast, which looked delicious, and drove home which takes about 30 minutes. Not sure exact time I was home but I'd say maybe 1:30ish.

I knew the focal point of the breach was my Servage account which hosts Witza.com and as many know I have some emails I use there. These emails were the key to a few accounts getting compromised. I'm an avid user of email forwards which actually keeps me more secure and compartmentalizes breaches like these. I can quickly make adjustments to secure things.

While they had access to Witza.com and the Servage account there is NO USER DATA there and the upgrade and donation pages stem from an unknown host for net.witza.com. Which was never compromised.

A defacement page was placed at www.witza.com as well and a tag page which I've kept up: <http://www.witza.com/rofl.php> Congrats to Onionzcrew btw. I'm sure they're super happy they managed to do this. This really just cost me 2 hours of work and a lost breakfast. I consider this a very minor breach and I've seen much worse by much better hackers with tons more skillz. But kudos to them anyways if for nothing more than causing some alarm.

A few members (Orgy and Diabolic) got rep fucked which can't be undone and some reps were removed from other member accounts too.

The admincp is htaccess secured and was never accessed. The staff section requires a password and that also was never access but to be frank with you...the staff section doesn't have anything important in it. It's just staff discussing policies and sometimes a thread to consider new staff. Very benign stuff. I don't run a drama queen website. We don't waste our time trash talking members and stirring up trouble. We're the trouble killers.

The few accounts compromised from me personally was the PP account which no damage was done and it's fully recovered. PP was the first phone call I made.

An unused personal Twitter account was stolen and used to update everyone about the compromise. It's now recovered and all their tweets are deleted except their original tweet. They can keep their shout out trophy.

A digitalocean account was compromised via a PW reset. I opened a DO account because it was dirt cheap and I wanted to toy around with it. I have like 10 hosting accounts on various services under aliases and different emails. There was zilch in the DO account. Account is also now recovered.

My HF account was compromised with a PW reset as well. This has the most damaging potential except for the fact our admincp is protected. And I have lots of safeguards for this contingency anyways. Very very little damage actually happened. Of course I was immediately able to fix this and recover the account just fine.

My Coinbase PW was reset but because I have 2FA they couldn't log in.

My Omniscient Minecraft account was stolen. They logged into HackerCraft and grieved. This was probably the only real damage the person did. We have a bit of a problem because it appears the backups stopped working a month ago and I'm not sure what Astonish has done so we can recover. But worse case scenario we just rebuild which was probably going to happen anyways for various reasons. In a way..they did me a favor. Silver lining in the clouds and all. Oh and account is recovered too.

During these few hours of the compromise some of my account do have credit cards attached and they might show last 4 digits in the billing page. This doesn't alarm me. I won't even bother to change my CC numbers. I might rotate a few cards, change a few emails, but overall this breach was very minor.

I know that those who get anything related to me think they've accomplished the climbing of Mt Omni and are heralded for amazing feats of superhuman ability but in this case. It's just not so. Heck I'm not even embarrassed a slight bit. Someone managed to get through the security of Servage through social engineering and took the low-hanging fruit. That stuff is practically a honey trap which gives me lots of alerts of a compromise. I've lost no accounts. I've not lost 1 cent and other than a couple hours of security work I'm going to go about my day as if this didn't happen.

Funniest part is they wanted Orgy banned but they rep fucked him and I just reset all his reps. He has a better rep now than before.

If anything I'll get extra traffic from the publicity and the drama. :)

Any questions?

Lightweight - January 1, 2014, 5:30 pm

This is sad, but it's a good sign somewhat for hacker craft.

Edit: Who will be building the new spawn? (the current one is ugly af, sorry)

Separate - January 1, 2014, 5:30 pm

So everything is ok now?

Nothing's going to happen? :)

No, nothing is going to happen except for maybe HackerCraft which a reset was seemingly likely anyways.

Eryn - January 1, 2014, 5:32 pm

I got a repfuck from the dude on your account.. what do I do?

notinvovled - January 1, 2014, 5:33 pm

On Hackercraft, There was a bunch of IGM given to people. Thats about it that happened there.

CyberneticTitan - January 1, 2014, 5:33 pm

"Any questions?"

After all this, how's your New Years?

Gustav. - January 1, 2014, 5:33 pm

Glad to have you back man. Was starting to get worried ?

EziNet - January 1, 2014, 5:33 pm

I hope everything is ok, Happy new year you too.

Please check my message when you can.

Well it seems like you handled it quite well. Good thing they weren't able to access any personal data.

Endanger™ - January 1, 2014, 5:34 pm

Wooh.

Glad you had a good time at your party and it's sad someone tried to do this but at least nothing went wrong.

Have a good night with your family, Omni.

wooo! But I'm so scared now... Those hackers...

Sky - January 1, 2014, 5:35 pm

Made for an interesting read, thanks for the update too Omni!

Sent you a PM with some Infoz on one of the so called 'Hackers' too ? You might want to check it out ?

They also leaked Witza site on there twitter.

Next time it happens everyone just needs to calm down, PM the staff, and relax.

Happy new years omni! Can I come next time?

If you'd like any help with HC, like with rebuilding and what-not, I'd be glad to help. I was concerned about this during the morning, but I am glad you put rumors to rest. Thanks Omniscient.

Understalker - January 1, 2014, 5:37 pm

Kudos to them.

Not much damage was done however.

Roger Waters - January 1, 2014, 5:37 pm

Just to make a point, Orgy had given some users rep calling them scammers, without any links to any scam reports, so when I saw that he got repfucked, it was not a surprise to me.

RySec - January 1, 2014, 5:37 pm

"They can keep their shout out trophy."

That's been a good sport.

Revenge - January 1, 2014, 5:37 pm

Thanks for the update Omni. I'm not sure if you noticed, but I'm sure they gave away some hackercraft awards also if you want to take care of that. ?

Gladiators - January 1, 2014, 5:37 pm

Sounds like you had a great time. Good thing they weren't able to access our personal data.

#Success - January 1, 2014, 5:38 pm

Question the people that received there award without earning it what will happen i hope not a ban. I have messaged you asking just for the award to be stripped from my account because it feels wrong to have something i didn't earn.

People are just little shits, it comes down to that lol.

But, like any business should, we all have precautions and backup plans. :P

Pretty weak though, a hosting account? Those have to be cake to SE.

Very nicely played off by you. Sucks for those who can't reverse the RF though.

SeraphsEmbrace - January 1, 2014, 5:38 pm

Have you looked into the supposed Hackercraft award that was given out to users during the breach?

Unfortunate you missed your breakfast, by the way.

webdev77 - January 1, 2014, 5:39 pm

Sad part is it was likely a former member or a current member since they wanted to make personal attacks against users here.

Glad nothing serious came of this.

Arizonalce - January 1, 2014, 5:39 pm

It's great that everything is sorted!

It was quite fun watching the drama unfold.

Anxuein - January 1, 2014, 5:39 pm

I'm sure another few users were repfucked too. I'll have to try and get their names.

EDIT: Oh yeah, what about the people who had the HC award?

EDIT2: Erin was repfucked too afaik.

muzzy. - January 1, 2014, 6:02 pm

Posts like this really make me admire you, Omni. They, although only on a small scale, took control of parts of HF and you just fixed it and laughed at their incompetence.

Such assholes c:

bugga - January 1, 2014, 6:03 pm

Well its good to know it wasn't anything to dramatic and all is okay.

Kudo's to Orgy and all those bullshit neutrals gone, he is a sweet heart really. :)

Omniscient - January 1, 2014, 6:04 pm

@Eryn yes you were the 3rd guy to get RF'd. You probably deserved one anyways though.

Quote:Well it seems like you handled it quite well. Good thing they weren't able to access any personal data.

This is like the 5th time this has happened. I'm getting as efficient at it as the Matrix Architect was at destroying Zion. :) Yes, that's really nerdy sounding.

Quote:Sent you a PM with some Infoz on one of the so called 'Hackers' too

As per my policy, I don't care who did it or why. My focus is on HF and maintaining security. I don't dwell, get revenge, or seek answers. I don't really care enough about these skids to waste additional time on them. As far as I'm concerned this is just another short-lived prank that's as effective as ringing my door bell and running away. Skids will be skidz and I live (proverbial) in a neighborhood full of them. I'm just so used to this that it no longer phases me.

Quote:They also leaked Witza site on there twitter.

No, they only think they did. Which is exactly what I want them to believe.

Quote:If you'd like any help with HC, like with rebuilding and what-not, I'd be glad to help.

I'm sure we'll get it all sorted out but may take a few days to figure out a good plan. I gotta see if Astonish has a more recent backup.

Quote:Thanks for the update Omni. I'm not sure if you noticed, but I'm sure they gave away some hackercraft awards also if you want to take care of that.

Ahh...I didn't notice that. I'm sure there might be a thing or two I didn't yet spot. Fixed it btw.

Quote:Pretty weak though, a hosting account? Those have to be cake to SE.

Pretty much. They got probably all they could and this just gives me a good excuse to take steps to prevent this from being a future problem.

Quote:Unfortunate you missed your breakfast, by the way.

It looked so good too. I took 2 bites and took off for home. But the security of HF takes precedence over just about everything else.

Quote:I'm sure another few users were repfucked too. I'll have to try and get their names.

No. You can see the repfucklogs that it was just those few users.

Quote:Glad to hear its all good! I think Ill start using email forwarding now too.. Seems a bit more secure than 1 account for everything

Much more secure. If your forward is stolen and you have it set right they gain no access to any real inbox or your previous emails. And fixing a forward is normally as easy as editing a DNS entry with your host or registrar. They key is always keeping the box it forwards to secure and hidden. And with forwards you can do it 2-3 times without problems. unsecure@mydomain.com -> secure@gmail.com -> securedandhidden@gmail.com will do the trick for most people. And there is no reason not to spread out your forwards you use so that if one forward is stolen your whole world isn't stolen at once.

unsecureforward1@mydomain.com
unsecureforward2@mydomain.com
unsecureforward3@mydomain.com

'Snorlax - January 1, 2014, 6:09 pm

I find it funny that they did all this, and all they got out of it was some public attention. No damage was done, other than you loosing your breakfast (most important meal of the day), and a few hours of work. That sucks, but it's good nothing else happened.

Thanks a lot for taking care of HF, even though it can be tough sometimes. Very well done, Omni.

Now a question: Would it be possible, and efficient, to implement a lockdown add-on, which could put Hack Forums into a lockdown, where the only people able to access it, would be the people with the password. The lockdown page/site/whatever would only be accessible to admins and superadmins, and it would require a password (a different one from the "unlockdown")?

I'd assume you could make it only accessible by local, or assigned IP addresses. On my game site I have this assigned to specific IP addresses. Our administrator panels cannot be accessed by people who are not authorized.

I noticed the "hackers" shared an image made by memegenerator.net to the twitter. I contacted the owner of the site, and hopefully I can get a copy of the IP which created the image.

And one more thing. They linked to a Danish song. I'm thinking they might be danes.

I could probably whip something up but no time right now. Maybe some other day. I could create a nuclear feature which would htaccess deny the site for everyone.

I actually feel sorry for you Omni. Myself as a food-lover had to hear that you had to leave your breakfast, not only a breakfast but a delicious breakfast.

Anyways, glad to see everything is up and running :) I actually got in touch with the hacker, or atleast one of them I guess. I got his skype ID if you're interested. By the way, Para also got the hackers account if you're interested in it. I can confirm it's his account. I think he's from either Denmark, Sweeden or something. Atleast in the north. Anyways, I tried to purchase everything from him, but after I saw Paras post and a PM discussion between him, I didn't go for it. My plan was to purchase it and give it to you, lol.

I tried my best to help, but guess I didn't do anything, if you look trough the PMs between Para and me, you'll just laugh ^^

Not that I noticed. If they did then it was removed before I had regained control. Also they never gained access to net.witza.com which is where we link to for upgrades. We don't actually link to the Servage hosting account at all.

The servage account is a legacy account I've had for years and I'm going to completely phase it out and close the account. They've proven themselves to be completely incompetent. At Servage the only thing there besides a couple email forwards are static sites.

Glad it was only a minor breach. And everything's fixed now.

v?x? - January 1, 2014, 8:35 pm

User data from this site may have not been stolen, but all sites hosted on Witza server have been. Which still has not been fixed. The following domains are the ones still defaced:

browserbattle.net
linuxbattle.com

What do you intend to do about the breach of data for those other sites, Omni?

NegativeRep - January 1, 2014, 8:38 pm

Hacking omni.. the Viagra of the internet.. Let's just hope their e-penises stay up for more then 4 hours and they have to get their e-penises cut off.

The only set of titties I'd love to motorboat for hours on end.

"Oh shit, BV1 has past my rep again. Quick, lets blame it on some hacker rep fucking me!"

Nice try Orgy... We all knew this day was coming.

Cleveland Brown - January 1, 2014, 8:44 pm

What is going to happen to the members who hacked? is there a way to track them down?

Heisenberg - January 1, 2014, 8:45 pm

Technically you lost more than a cent taking the bill of the breakfast you paid for into consideration.

Omniscient doesn't care who did it.

Dood - January 1, 2014, 8:54 pm

Well, at least we now have an almost definite answer to the HackerCraft server question. Good thing

I did my giveaway prize drawing early, otherwise I probably would have ended up with a closed account.

Hackforums is like the first stepping stone of every hacking group's journey...

No user data there. I'll fix those sites now.

It was a complimentary breakfast.

I have a copy of all files that were stolen, if you wish to take a look?

Before all you skids PM me, no I am not releasing this. It will be for mine and Omniscent's eyes ONLY.

EDIT: The main compromised data was pronforum. However you seem to not care about that site.

Kill Joy - January 1, 2014, 9:01 pm

Thank you for the update and the quick actions you did to ensure our security. :)

It goes to show you actually do care about the members here as some people get the opposite impression.

Edit: Quick question: Did you get an autograph from Katy Perry?

Edit 2: If possible, post some pictures? That is all. :P

Blazin - January 1, 2014, 9:03 pm

Thank you for the update omni. Glad you are on top of things now. Hopefully you can prevent how this was done, and it just made you secure things that much better bro :)

Nas - January 1, 2014, 9:07 pm

I have a question.

You said that there a passcode in the staff section also a Htaccess for the admin pannel.

Did'int you send the passcodes via PM to other staff? They posted on twitter saying they looked threw your PM's or whatever.

I'm not claiming anything, this is just question.

DeltaGrinch - January 1, 2014, 9:15 pm

Would you prevent this from happening in the future? Reading this made me sad though, you haven't finish/started eating your breakfast.

It's nothing of value.

I use unique credentials to login to every site. And well before that site died I had users force PW change here on HF. Very unlikely any credentials of members still work and they have to be unhashed anyways. Most of the accounts on that site are spam anyways.

I expect within 30 days nothing will be left on the Servage account. I'll use another of my junk hosts and split up the content.

Understandable. Well, good luck with cleaning up this (not so big of a) mess. Cheers for your replies!

evilace - January 1, 2014, 9:20 pm

When will you be replying to sticky threads? You replied to me but not the 2nd time. It's only because I won't be on soon. Thanks man and good luck with security checks.

Glad nothing serious happened to the site.

Omniscient - January 1, 2014, 9:22 pm

Okay, I think I answered all questions and all important info was discussed.

I'm closing this now and I'll unstick it in a day or two.

Thanks everyone.
