

Forum: Hack Forums

Thread: Member asking me to do FAKE vouch.

Vinzuhara - January 14, 2014, 4:53 pm

A while ago, a member on HF PM'd me asking me to send him images of my paypal where I was receiving money. He wanted me to do this so he could get a "fake" vouch. What he offered me was a copy of the ebook he was selling in return.

What I wanted to know is, is this against the rules of the Marketplace? Sorry if it is the "Help" section, as I could not find anything about fake vouches. And to any member who wants to know who was the one asking me for fake vouches, I apologize as the PM's he sent me were long ago deleted.

The reason I am making this now, is because I only recently remembered this incident. Also, I saw a thread being posted about an incident that happened that is similar to mine. If the Staff could go through my deleted PM's, they'd fine it.

Trundle™ - January 14, 2014, 4:54 pm

If I'm understanding this correctly, faking a vouch is forbidden.
I'd report the player.

Imminent - January 14, 2014, 4:55 pm

Fake vouches are against the rules.

Report the member immediately.

Troye - January 14, 2014, 4:56 pm

(Jan 14, 2014 05:54 PM)Desktop™ Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) If I'm understanding this correctly, faking a vouch is forbidden.

I'd report the player.

The player? Do you mean the user?

OT: Report the user to a staff member with on site proof.

NoMemes - January 14, 2014, 4:56 pm

I guess you can put up a scam report for fraudulent vouching.

I don't think the rules cover anything about this though. I will go read them again real quick.

Edit:

Only rule that sorta relates:

"Ebook Bazaar

1. No begging for review or vouch copies."

Growli - January 14, 2014, 4:57 pm

Report the member asap.

I am pretty sure that is against the rules.

Positive - January 14, 2014, 5:03 pm

There is no official set rule on this particular issue yet.