Thread: Developement of a new altcoin - Looking for a coder

ThaMysterious - January 22, 2014, 1:28 pm

Hi guys.

I have a Team of developers aswell as some investors -
We have a pool, blockchain and websites - Graphic designers

We are looking for a coder, who knows how to create a altcoin aswell as updating the client/wallet.

If you are interested in this (You might get paid aswell)

Post below and i will get back to you, we believe that this coin can go far it will be a funny coin.

Well duh... Because it's a funny coin! He already posted that bit... Get with the programme dude
Lmfao

@op instead of the blockchain being made up of random numbers an chars why not have the pow generate jokes by taking a char set of a predetermined length and iterate through it until it finds a joke?

Hell this thread could be the first block lmfao

I built a sample miner as proof of concept and it mined this sentence.

Whynotgetarealjobinsteadofmakingyetanotherstittypreminedpumpanddumpscamcurrency.

Funny enough?

Another thing don't you think you should have actually built the coin before drafting in the graphic designers. You sir are a moron.

What he's saying is

If someone is capable of programming this why would they do it for you and "maybe" get paid instead of doing it themselves and definitely get all the profit?

Exactly this. Changing the source code to create a new coin isn't hard work. Nor is setting up a pool, blockchain, graphics etc. Literally anyone could knock out a new coin in a weekend, that includes setting up a pool, blockchain viewer, and all the graphic work that would be needed. 99% of the code base is already established, you just need to edit a few files and be on your way.

Take a step back for a second, and consider what you have to offer that would make your coin stand out from the rest. There are so many altcoins now that just change the coin cap, block rewards, time between blocks and difficulty adjustment times.

You're telling us that you have investors, but the core of your little idea is the coin itself while only mentioning they "might" get paid. What exactly are your investors investing in if not the core of the project?

You also tell us you have developers, but need someone to create the coin for you. What exactly do they develop then?

I'm more than capable of creating a new coins based off of whichever coin you wish, however my time isn't free. If you have investors, there should be no issues with me being paid for my time. I charge per milestone, which will be agreed upon before starting work. 50% up front, 50% once completed.

Honestly from your post, I have little to no faith in you being able to get this off the ground. However money talks, and if the price is right I'll help you out on your little project.

ThaMysterious - January 23, 2014, 5:33 am

Okay guys - The coder will be a part of the coin , so a part of the time its not just a one time job which needs to be done .

The interest on this coin has increased, from the start we have already recieved emails from people asking for the release.

The coder will be a part of the team aswell holding a part of shares.

We have everything - We just need a coder to edit the source and create the coin - we have hosting - dedicated servers everything. The coder will be a part of the team as i said , you will hold a part of the shares.

Add one of the developers on skype : Bitcoinicon

If your interested in this we are seriously dedicated to this project.

Thanks

I write a single thread and i get all this negative energy.

If you are not interested in this don't even make a thread because this is for people who is dedicated into this. Its just your loss, so your exactly the moron.

FurfUksake - January 23, 2014, 6:12 am

Really? My loss?

Anyone who wants to make an altcoin can quite easily do so for themselves or alternatively can get paid to do so by one of the many projects on elance.com desperately searching for someone with the required skill set to make one.

I have done 2 projects like this before both on elance, one paid me $600 and the other paid $1100. So of course its my loss not waiting to do it for a share in your shitty premixed "funny" coin.

Grow up mate, The "funny" altcoin boat has sailed long ago.

I'm still wondering how the fuck you expect a coder to do this for you for free?

EDIT: So you say he has shares, well then, that must mean around 80% of the shares? As he is, of course, doing all the hardwork, amiright?

Thread is closed - We don't need a immature coder like you as we already found a professional and reliable one.

Reading between the you found some spotty teenage schleprock trudging around his parents basement who has convinced you that he can do it?

The difference between a professional and an amateur is that a professional gets paid for doing the task... and since you aren't paying he is by definition an amateur...

Good luck though mate.

P.S. Might wanna actually close the thread lol

Hi ThaMysterious,

I don't get the point of this. There's already about 1,482,794,359,142,994.5 altcoins, so what's the point of yours? If you want to really be innovative, try making your own altcoin (don't use any of coins source.) Do that, and I'll be really impressed.

RMS thinks that bitcoin isn't anonymous enough, so if you build something to his standards, I'm sure he'd buy into it.

Also, why say that one *might be payed. I don't think anyone here would really work for free.

Finally, I don't get what you mean by "funny coin." Is it going to talk and tell you jokes? Is it going to have a funky way of obtaining them? Is the humor going to be black humor, dry humor, etc?

Best regards,
Brayden

===EDIT===

Please actually close the thread.
