Thread: EA Game "Battlefield 4" Map Silk Road in correlation with Drug site "Silk Road"!

Heywannadancesil - February 19, 2014, 6:31 pm

Recently in the first DLC pack for BF4 there was a map released called "Silk Road" around the time of the release Silk Road the website came under fire by the US government. Is it possible due to the recent law suit in the game that the EA developers had come into contact with the creators of Silk Road. Struck a deal and EA made a shit ton of cash in return of naming one of the maps after Silk Road. As soon as EA got this "New Cash" The law suits went away. Only until more recently Silk Road got clapped by the 4chan Party van and got hacked by a anon that EA has come under more fire. Conspiracy or Illuminati?

Discuss.

I'm pretty sure the Illuminati did this. Here is why:

$$BF4 + BF3 = 7$$

$$7 - 1 = 6$$

$$6 + 660 = 666$$

$$666 = \text{Illuminati.}$$

So in conclusion, EA is the Illuminati, illuminati is illuminati, and religion is an illusion made by the government.

Seriously? There's no way in hell the map or map name has anything to do with the former drug website.

You do know the one and only creator/owner of The Silk Road underground marketplace, Ross Ulbricht, was arrested last fall, the site shut down, and is currently in prison, right? Even if he wasn't, his site name wasn't trademarked, it was an illegal site.

I doubt that a game has any influence on what the government focuses on next (I don't know exactly what Silk Road is so I'm basing it on the facts you've given)

The map is based off the Chinese trading route's called the "Silk Road"

Exactly. The drug website Silk Road did not create the title and neither did EA. It's actually an ancient trade route where actual silk was imported from China into Europe. The Silk Road was also used for other trading like spices too.

OP is ignorant.
