Thread: How Cannabis\(and the THC in such\) kills cancer cells.

chrisman0091 - February 25, 2014, 1:56 pm

Found this video, and found it very informative. Now I will state that I do smoke every now and then, and never really believed(or disbelieved) the fact that it actually kills cancer cells.

Find the video here:

Thoughts on the video/subject? What you believed prior to/after the video?

I didn't check the vide as I know alot about this stuff, as you say in the title about thc, it's mostly the cbd doing the medicinal stuff. It's really interesting and worth looking into!

I cant watch videos cause i'm out of data. But a while back I did do some research on this subject. Now, it dosnt kill cancer cells but it does drastically slow down the process of them forming and can really benefit cancer patients and people who have cancer genes. THC is known for many natural curing and can help with way more than just "curing" cancer. My grandma is a nurse and she has all these facts of why it's bad, but it really isn't. If you believe in god, he had to put it here for a reason. If you don't, people kept it here for a reason. It's a miracle grown on plants.

Yes, it is more of the endocannabinoids, though the THC does play a factor. It is actually a mixture of the two that creates what we know to be the high of cannabis itself.

Ahh yeah. It does indeed drastically slow down the growth, but actually can kill it. Though not like it in itself is killing it, more of it committing suicide(if that makes sense, semi-quoting the video).

Another reason it is better than chemotherapy is it targets specifically the cancer cells, where as chemo targets everything(which is what leads to the things like losing weight, hair loss, etc.)

I really think it depend up to the person.

Some people are having really bad feeling related to smoking pot.

For myself , I think marijuana is just soo fking good...

Fair enough, its very interesting though. I think chemo should be illegal, it can really mess some people up though I do know people who have survived cause of it.

Well this wouldnt just be smoking it either. If time was to actually put into it there could be actual treatment made out of it. And of course it isnt for everybody, but for those who do use it, it can help. Thanks for the input.

I wouldnt go so far to say illegal, but there are some stupid laws regarded to it(such as it is illegal to not get your child chemotherapy, they can get taken to you).

King Cairo - February 25, 2014, 2:47 pm

You dont need to smoke it too slow down the process of cancer cells growing.

There is a thing called cannabis oil.

Alright, but don't you think it's unfair? I mean ya, some kids it can kill or make it worse but isn't it worth a shot for them too? They deserve to get help. Equal rights isn't always equal. But if that's the case they should be able to take Marinol or smoke marijuana. (Marinol is a pill with THC extract that's prescribed for people who cant smoke, the high is much harder and way different, wouldn't really recommend it though.)

The_Super_Phreak - February 25, 2014, 2:59 pm

Look up Rick Simpson Oil. It's pretty much a very high concentration cbd rich liquid. There are many stories of people having their cancer go into remission solely on it. Now I'm not saying it's all real, this is the internet after all.. so take it with a grain of salt, but even if it doesn't kill cancer, it would help your appetite.

Yeah, which ofc you can make edibles with. You could also use a vaporizer.

Yeah, like I said I dont think it is always good, but the option to have that chance is of course better than nothing.

Hmm, thanks for the share! If I ever get cancer that could come in handy(or if a friend/family does). The more I know(and knowing is half the battle)!

It turns out everyday science is finding more and more benefits of cannabis and so far it hasn't been found to be harmful.

Yeah. Obviously smoking it could cause lung harm, but that goes for any kind of smoke, and there are many other ways to use it besides smoking it. The only ever bad thing really from it is all based on the user, such as them becoming lazy, letting it make them a "bum," or allowing it to take them to actual more harmful drugs.

They say it's a gateway drug. The only gateway it is is to the fridge.

Which there is a lot of people that turn into a bum but there's also those who make there life very well. Like Seth Rouge.

Yeah, not everybody can control themselves with it(letting it make them a bum), so it all depends on the user. But of course there are even more people who DON'T let it make them a bum, so no reason for it to be illegal because of those who do.
