Legit guy, talked to him and tested his protection.

Was able to withstand about 10 Gbps.

A few spelling mistakes in there doesn't give me much confidence in you at all.

Bandwith > Bandwidth (come on really :/)

Realiability > Reliability

Assitance > Assistance

:facepalm:

If someone is being ddosed and you say for them to contact you for assistance, what assistance are you going to give them?

What can you do from your side to help them?

Personally, I was not the one who created the thread and did not have time to review the text content at the time of me posting it. I've had the corrections made and have updated pretty well everything else. As for what we can do for our customers in the case of a DDoS attack is forward it to our data center's mitigation team (if not automatically being handled).

I commend you for pointing out these mistakes.

Just tossed up a new thread design which better displays information.

Onuzi - May 13, 2014, 11:18 am

Great/Reliable/Friendly/Fast.

These are really good for hosting a minecraft server.

Been using these for 2Weeks and no issues what so ever.

Do all plans come with a dedicated IP?
Also, are plans available in the UK/EU?

As well, our current servers are hosted in Montreal, Canada. Our next location will be Paris, France.

Thanks for the quick reply. I might consider paying for Minecraft hosting from you once dedicated IPs are available and servers are available from France.

I'm loving the hosting right now, thank you! ?

Aschorren - June 7, 2014, 11:07 pm

Your company looks reliable, great, and absolutely amazing but I've pinpointed only one problem.

The name... HostHavoc... is made up of two English words being:

Host: We all know what hosting means.

Havoc: Meaning destruction in a horrible connotation.

Again, this is not against your company service or reliability, but anyone fluid and familiar in the English language would question buying a server from a company which translated definition by definition means Destructive Host or Hosting Destruction.

If I were you, I would consider a rename to consider sales and first impressions.

If I were you, I would consider a rename to consider sales and first impressions. You are the first one in our 4 months of running to make such a complaint, every other report on the same topic has always been in relation to positive feedback on the name. I respect your opinion, though I don't see why you are taking the name of a company so literally. It's nearly the same as seeing 'Apple' as a company that sells apples. Going through the fees and process of renaming a corporation is not something I want or will do.

lethaloverride - June 9, 2014, 10:03 pm

I am ok with the name and I have been using the service for about a week. I signed up for 6 months Everything running great. Thanks :)

edit

Upto what level ddos attacks would the server withstand before dying?

Also, do you have any other location other than Canada, and a test server? Would like to check ping etc :)

DrDoof - June 10, 2014, 4:25 pm

Would also appreciate a test server to come and check my ping on! ?

EDIT: Ok, so because I'm lazy and didn't want to wait I bought the 512mb package to check it out. ? Here's a quick review..

*Good speed. I live in Sweden which is pretty far away from the server and I get ~130 ms, which is not the best but for sure playable.

*Fast proccess, I clicked the buy button and it immediately prompted me with creating a account and after that sent me straight to PayPal. After the payment was done I got redirected back to their site where I within seconds could logon to the Multicraft panel.

*Extremely cheap! ++

I definitely recommend this service. Maybe a little more for people near the Canada area, but as I said, it's playable here in Sweden too. Will buy from again!

4/5 doofs

(PM me if you want to join the server I bought to test the connection?)
