HF's Workstations

Need inspiration on what to do with you setup? How to set it up? Where to place things?

You definitely have come to the right thread. I'm going to be sharing anyone who drops their setups in a main post. This will include a link directly to the setup!

Please post away photos of your setup, and hopefully we can give inspiration for people who are looking to update their setups!

Thanks guys!

When you try to run other peoples shit for them and print off as much shit as I do every day you'll end up with a rather messy desk, my desk is also an L shaped desk and there's a lot more mess on the other side off camera.

All those cables under your desk :P I would go to ikea and buy some cable management appliances under your desk. It will make your setup look much better.

Here is my setup. Its my birthday in a week so I will be upgrading it all. I will send through an updated photo in a week. :)

I like my screen realty. Without having to overload and overlap all my windows.

When I am web designing, I can put my code window on one, and the preview / photoshop on the other. makes it less time consuming to then switch between, when i can just turn my head.

Technically, if you include laptops and tvs, i also have 5.

Technically it doesnt though, if you are reviewing code, especially with new programming tools such as "Brackets" from Adobe, you can actually live edit websites, and the instant a key is pressed, the site updates. So, I can type into CSS files, and watch the site change, without having to save, then alt-tab.

I have my TV hooked up to my laptop via HDMI and have them as a dual monitor, it works oddly but nicely.

It's a 1080P 3D 32 or 38" TV, I'm happy with it as a monitor.
