all of his drive by methods are unique and non-saturated

StoneySec - March 8, 2014, 6:46 pm hold on though arent all of these patched in the latest current versions of each one of these software???. i mean its hard evidence it shows your using an outdated firefox in the video. most of this will not work if people are up to date correct?

id like to buy this if i know it works for current versions, but that would mean 0day exploits right? not trying to bash sells at all just want clarification.

The video is old. Of course it's working with last version of each software!

It's not really a 0 day because it's using available functions to achieve his goal.

It's working and not pathched with current versions, be sure.

Little sketchy about buying this... Seems too good to be true.

"Integration - Just choose a site of your choice and click where you want to put the drive by!"

What does this function do? I don't have my own website and not experienced in dealing with one, do you offer a full support in helping to set everything up?

All drive-bys accept only .exe files? What about JRat's .jar output? Is there any way to use it? (or can you update to allow it?)

Is it possible to make the download window pop-up automatically instead of having to click any buttons?

Will Silverlight drive-by work if there is no Silverlight installed on the computer to begin with? I'm afraid that not many people use it... And is there any other variation of Flash exploit that can be made to allow instant execution instead of just being a drop? I heard someone mentioning metasploit from another thread and that it has a good execution rate.

No, you'll have to combine them after building seperately, you can always use a http bot to get stats on how many bots you have and most probably could whip up something that gives hits and ratios if you're smart.

If using the FireFox one I would advise everyone to use a little browser detection within your themes and use Silverlight/Java/Adobe Air ones for chrome and other browsers.

According to Wikipedia : "Microsoft Silverlight had a penetration of 64.16% on May 2011"

And according to this site : "Silverlight 2+3+4 sits around 86%" (in 2012)

We are in 2014 now. So it must be higher! And even if your target doesn't have Silverlight, a prompt will be shown to install it (same for Adobe AIR).

This isn't the "easy exploit kit setup.exe", you can find that on other forums (malware, cough). You've gotta do stuff manually, setting up JS and such to detect software on the computer is up to you. The coder takes care of the program, you take care on how you spread it.

I may add a panel to see stats (in future updates) but as I said in my response, there is no "better" choice. Just use all drive by & exploit to get a maximum penetration rate.

does the firefox outdated drive by still works with firefox? If i buy the new ones, is it gonna be fud?

Lycoso - May 20, 2014, 3:43 pm

Well OP can you tell me if i use a normal drive by with a silent drive by..for better success rate. will it work? also planning to redirect them after successful execution. is it possible ? i also tried to buy using your website but it was asking for the exe file which i don't have right now. can't i change the file once i select this? so confuse. please let me know.

Solomon Grundy - May 20, 2014, 4:55 pm

il say most of them are not FUD after reviewing products but will like to knw if future updates are guaranteed and how often do you make them FUD when detected

The free test version is buggy with last version of firefox but not the paid one. You have scan of each drive by on the website.

Yes it will work.

The redirect feature is not implemented. Just buy when you have your exe file.

Most of them? Only 3/8 got detections O.o'.

At the moment, prices do not contain updates, I may add a package for this.

So just wait till the drive by you want is FUD. I will make a new post here, don't worry.

Just find an exchanger who does PP -> BTC, LTC or OMC.

I can give you one free update link if needed.

These are individual exploits. However, they are very easy to put into a custom EK if needed.

As far as i know, Firefox extension exploit only works upto v27. After v27 the Vulnerability has been patched.

Quick question... why the fuck are you selling metasploit made 'exploits'.

Public:

Adobe Reader less then 9.4
CVE-2011-0609
in metasploit

Java silent drive by CVE-2013-01-19
in metasploit

shall i go on?

It's not an exploit, it's a drive-by. No it's not patched. I will make a video with the last version.

If I follow your thought, we can't sell a CVE if it's already in metasploit?

Yes, it's less detected than metasploit one and it's smaller too.
