I must say, I'm a huge fan of that banner.

Good luck with the group bud.

Nullezz - March 12, 2014, 1:41 am

The userbar is sick and good luck with your group Lani I will surely apply when the recruitment starts.

Huge fan of the banner, Good luck with this!

Dorrance - March 12, 2014, 2:37 am

Sexy banner sure hope to see this group in the future

Bet - March 12, 2014, 2:41 am

Woah, the userbar looks amazing! Can't wait to see what is made of the group. Good luck!

Legit Hackz - March 12, 2014, 2:48 am

That is one awesome userbar. Hope to see your group do great things!

Fox™ - March 12, 2014, 3:05 am

The graphics are amazing, Lani. I'll be excited to see when recruitment opens up.

vitafortis - March 12, 2014, 3:28 am

Nice userbar and banner. I wish the group good luck.

The GRim - March 12, 2014, 3:29 am

Whoa mate, that's one hell of an userbar.

Anakin™ - March 12, 2014, 3:34 am

This simply has to be the best userbar I've seen in a while.

Good luck with the group guys.

ZuGgY - March 12, 2014, 3:36 am

Userbar sure does look sexy. Can't wait to find out more.

Eeluminati - March 12, 2014, 3:42 am

Good looking group, I wish you much luck Lani.

muzzy. - March 12, 2014, 5:27 am

This, actually, is the first new group in a while I've been interested in. I like the direction you took from Dynasty.

I'll be sure to apply. Best of luck, boys.

Roger Waters - March 12, 2014, 6:07 am

I have high expectations for this group, will be applying if there is a recruitment.

Vitani's Mate - March 12, 2014, 6:09 am

Wow a new group? xD

I never saw this coming but wow. I really like the userbar and the banner. Looks trippy as fuck.

I would LOVE to be a member of this awesome sexy group.

Kioshi - March 12, 2014, 6:34 am

I'm assuming so they keep the level of applications manageable, opening recruitment back up once they've gone through them. I guess it makes more sense than having hundreds of applications to go through all at once.

The majority of people commented about the design because it is one of the few things that we can have a solid opinion on, as everything else is vague.

Looking at what is mentioned in the posts, very few people associated the design with the actual quality of the group.

actual meaning of the word Polymath. Also, Polymath implies singular, you're implying plural, so Polymaths. >.>

A polymath (Greek: ?????u????, polymathes, "having learned much")[1] is a person whose expertise spans a significant number of different subject areas; such a person is known to draw on complex bodies of knowledge to solve specific problems.

Broad: covering a large number and wide scope of subjects or areas.

Expertise: expert skill or knowledge in a particular field.

Expert: having or involving authoritative knowledge.

I think you can see where I'm going with this. If you want to remain true to the name of the group, you'll invite members that are experts in their fields, not members that are people who know a little about a lot.

IE: A Programmer knows programming. However, he may not know literature. Therefore, he MAY be considered an expert in programming. However, a student (as most of HF is) knows a little about a variety of subjects, and cannot be considered to be an expert in any subjects that he is strictly taught.

If you don't know where I'm going with this, use Google.

I do not know who told you that we are inviting people people with little knowledge in multiple fields.

Neither me or Sh1eld have said such thing.

All I'm saying is be consistent with what you want and what you say. How can you expect to be taken seriously when you're not even consistent enough to have matching expectations and descriptions, both of which should reflect each other so that there's absolutely no question.

If your description says A, and your memberbase reflects B, whereas $A \neq B$, then no one will take you or the group Polymath seriously, except for Userbar Whores.

Just because you are good in what you do best, it does not mean that you are retarded in everything else. We recruit people who have a broad knowledge and also show expertise in their fields. Intellectuals are usually very good at something, but also have broad knowledge in regards to other things.

(Mar 13, 2014 06:02 AM)vitafortis Wrote: [\[CITE\]](#) Again, agreed, but that once again does not make you a Polymath.

Interesting quote for you:

"A human being should be able to change a diaper, plan an invasion, butcher a hog, conn a ship, design a building, write a sonnet, balance accounts, build a wall, set a bone, comfort the dying, take orders, give orders, cooperate, act alone, solve equations, analyze a new problem, pitch manure, program a computer, cook a tasty meal, fight efficiently, die gallantly. Specialization is for insects." Robert A. Heinlein, Time Enough for Love (1973)

Got that from a website about Polymath's

It is. Polymath is a group of people with broad knowledge. However, we have to also recruit those who are experts in their fields, especially in the beginning. We are not just debate group. We need someone who know what they talk about on a professional level, so that projects and such things are possible with the best output.

Do not worry about anything. Sh1eld and I are trying to run things silently at the moment, so that we can build the group as we intended. However, this should probably answer most of the questions in this thread.

So if we are going by the description of the word itself, does that mean that to be recruited you must be an expert in multiple fields? If not, then I am confused as to why you cannot seem to settle on an actual requirement.

We need time to get on the rails. We cannot just snap our fingers and make everything run as intended. Patience is a virtue.

Recruitment status will be posted in this thread.

1. No one did. But if you have a problem with a leader or someone else, then keep the shit for yourself or solve it in a PM. Nobody wants to read 10 pages of past bullshit between two members.

2. Did I say it wasn't allowed? "This group will be shit blabla" is not arguing about anything.

3. I know the stuff the leaders doesn't want to make public yet. There is a difference between keeping it secret and not knowing it. Keeping it secret is what the leaders do.

No offense honestly, but both times when I tried buying a group people begged me to have leadership or tried "Convincing" me.

1. I didn't even have a group.
2. It was just really annoying.

I'm not trying to tell you what to do or anything, just saying it might be annoying him especially if he's trying to be really nice about the situation.

This. In my personal opinion, I admire the group description. It portrays a sense of elegance and knowledge. Instead of "our group is a bunch of gamers" it shows that the individuals within the group possess knowledge, and were carefully surveyed and selected. However, each man to his own. If they choose to interpret the description in a literal manner, let them do that. Although if they interpret it literally I do believe they're missing the bigger picture.

Seriously, though... They really don't seem like a group who will take buy-ins, just look at hos Sh1eld and Lani handled the recruitment with seriousness. Look at how they talk about only the best getting accepted.

I don't think it's gonna be a lounge group. I was PM'd asking if I had any particular skills besides intellect. I don't so I was understandably denied. I feel they may be a group looking to make profits in the marketplace, allowing only highly skilled individuals who can assist in this goal into their group.

Same here.

Nope. Void isn't made of "members with broad knowledge" or whatever bizarre meaning is behind Polymath's description. If I had to define it, I'd say it's a group of debaters with some intelligence depending on the member, it's that simple.

Just a guess. I mean he wasn't specific but he asked me if I had any specialties aside from intellect. When I'm in a group my contribution is usually assisting in thread design, pooling some money together for contests in the groups name, etc. I just get the feeling they're looking for capable people

Instead of looking at the bigger picture and being creative while reading the description they instead decide to take it literally. If they begin to bash and hate on Polymath after being denied, they obviously didn't deserve to be in the group to begin with. Maintain your personality throughout your life, don't act like someone or something you're not. If you liked the group before, you will still like the group even if you have been denied. If you only liked it because you wanted to be in it, it will show. Even if they did manage to be recruited, their lack of contributions would show their true personality.

I like how you judge groups without even being in the group, getting to know the people in the group, or knowing what the group's all about. Just curious, are you like this with all groups? It appears you aren't in any custom usergroups. The Brotherhood is still here and running strong. Maybe if you get your head out of your ass you can see what groups are all about.

I'm not in any custom usergroups? I'm in Void if that's what you're talking about, which is a decent group. The Brotherhood is here, you're right, but not that active. Actually I haven't really seen them do shit. I would like to know what the group is all about but so far whenever somebody asks we get some shitty and vague response. Which proves the leaders don't even know where they're going with this group. ffs Lanisters were more useful than this group, at least you knew what they were about.

I'm waiting to be proved wrong. That there is more to this group than some shiny userbar. What exactly is the group's objective? I have yet to get answer on this question instead of vague replies that don't answer shit.

I like how you talk negatively about those who criticize when you would criticize every edition of the HF News. When, to be honest, we didn't give a shit. You would sit there behind your computer screen going line-by-line, reading and checking for the smallest grammar or spelling mistakes and actually thinking it meant something. I can't take you seriously after that pissy fit you had in the Writ3rs sf. All you do is fucking bitch, put a sock in it. Enjoy your shit group, the fuck do I care.

It is satisfying to see a group that is not ill-tempered when it comes to questions regarding recruitment, acceptance, and denial. The visible goals so far behind this group aren't unique, but they are scarce and what we do need, more and more, in groups. I'm looking forward to finding out more about the group. After the upcoming recruitment later today, when will there be a new one? I haven't had the time to check up with HF the past week and a half due to finals, planning for my birthday and anniversary, and family-related issues and I'm sure there's others who have missed the past two recruitments and are most likely going to miss the next and last one for awhile.

No because it does a countdown to that specific time in that specific timezone. So no matter where you are, it will always show that 8-9 hours left, because it doesn't matter where you are located.

Recruitment was pretty unique too, not sure whether to call it strange or good. Usually groups want you to write write write but Lani and Sh1eld put a max at 150 words. Normally you're writing shit to make it go to 500 minimum for the general group and here you're trying to cut it to 150. Strange because not much write write write, good for lazy people, good for group leaders and good for the little recruitment duration thing.

Yeah, it helps encourage quality rather than quantity. The short recruitments are great because it helps the leaders not get overwhelmed with too many applications.

Although I do have doubts of me getting in when comparing myself to most of the applicants who were recruited. Most of them are currently enrolled into college for Computer Science or computer related topics while I'm most likely going to go to college for petroleum engineering.

The low maximum word limit will persuade you to only write about your best topics and fields of knowledge. With such a small word limit you won't write about information that is of no importance. This helps the group leaders know what you're best at. The leaders also thoroughly review your profile, so the useless information you didn't include, they'll most likely find out on their own accord.

Nope.

But we are talking via PM right now. I've only really ever talked to Shield once before when I admitted I was wrong about something to do with the HF News, or something like that.

Most groups don't even send a message when you're denied, I think this is one of the first occurrences I remember of this happening, but I've only been here since 2012.

I've been here since '10, and this is the first I've heard of it as well (well, except never mind. I did personally private message some of those who applied for Rhythm way back who knows when explaining the reasons behind their non-acceptance).

It was from Shield. I got it now long after I posted on the thread asking for someone to explain the discrepancy between the definition of the word and the group description (at the time of denial) so one can only assume that it stemmed from that. However I cannot be 100% certain that was the case.

"Polymath is a group of individuals with broad knowledge." That must be the most vague and retarded description of the group. Whoever made it has no knowledge or creativity.

No. The groups have to have some sort of description. I have broad knowledge on how to make a fucking cereal, I have a broad knowledge on how to take a shit. Broad knowledge of what?

Clearly you have no creativity by saying that. If you had even the smallest amount of creativity you'd let your mind decide what the meaning behind that truly was. Think before you post. Yes, it is vague, but that gives you room to believe what you'd like, causing you to constantly think of what it could possibly mean. It's like the end of an episode within a series, it ends but leaves you with a cliff hanger. This keeps the idea in your mind.

The groups don't have to have a detailed description. They don't want to specialize in one field in particular, what's wrong with that?

I'd rather have a group filled with members who have a combined knowledge that covers a vast area, as opposed to a group of people who are dedicated to one task in particular.

You can do with the group as you want. You can still "BUY" a group and go on a vacation or buy a car. Nobody really cares what you want to do.

Some people decided they want to lay out a few thousand bucks to buy a group on Hack Forums. Fine. In a few months they can sell the group and earn a few extra thousand bucks, while you wasted your money on a shitty vacation.

Sometimes simplicity is key.

"Join my super awesome group! We have a Minecraft server and a Teamspeak! We also do giveaways and we have HQ members!"

or

"Join our group. We engage in general discussion about various topics."

Just finished listening to the podcast thing, and I can honestly say I only enjoyed the music. The stupid "This is jennifer lopez, this is Jay-Z" completely didn't fit for an EDM radio, you're better off just fading the next track and talking over it at like 10% volume. Sh1eld and Stealth already said stop, so hopefully I will be the last one to say stop, otherwise I'll send a PM to Judge Dredd. I'm not looking to get invited into the group, if you look at my post you'd quickly realize the posts I have created within this thread are addressing other members for the most part. The above post wasn't even meant towards the group itself. Also, polymoths? You'd think for a Writ3r you'd be higher in terms of quality.

Nina, I ask this in the nicest way possible. Please do not post things such as this in the Polymath thread.

I do not want anyone in Legion to post hate here, because we as a group were blacklisted. As a group, they have the right to blacklist anyone they want, and I respect them for it.

Edit: Of course I am not in charge of the group, but this is just an opinion.

Check the recruitment thread and look at the people above/below you. If the ones after you have been denied/accepted, then you may be waitlisted or something.

Of course, this is all assuming they are going over the applications one by one in the order posted.

Of course, this is all assuming they are going over the applications one by one in the order posted. It's not necessarily in a specific order. If you look at exactly what you said then you can see there is a little pattern, applications from the start, middle, and end, of the thread are being reviewed and there are applications dotted around which have been reviewed. All we can say for now is that the process isn't over and that Sh1eld and Lani are still working on them.

I've not gotten a PM at all regarding status, so I'd assume there's no order. My app. was posted by Renium on the second page - in theory, if they went in order, I would've been PM'd a while ago.

I wouldn't recommend it. I got kicked for reasons which were disproved by logic and was never given a legitimate reason why I was kicked. I was told that I didn't post in five days when I posted at least one time a day and didn't miss one day since joining. If you get an assignment plan on doing it the day it comes out because you won't be given a date to complete it by. I'm really surprised by this because every group has a date you need to have an assignment or project done by and the members of the group won't be able to manage their time well if they aren't told the date they need to hand their assignments in on time. That is a sign of bad leadership if you ask me, I had higher thoughts for this group. Such a shame Sh1eld ruined it for me and wouldn't be surprised if he kicked others for similar reasons. He can't even reply to a simple message.

I'm aware of both of those realities. Simply refuting an fallacious statement made on his end is all. There's no room for creating lies here.

There's nothing wrong with not posting but once every few days. However, there is something wrong with lying about one's activities within a group.

Some people think that money will get them into any group. Glad to see that Polymath isn't a superficial, money hungry group. (Not trying to do sarcasm, not trying to lick dick either, I respect your group, and I haven't even applied when I could, just to be clear.)

I also said what marketing skills I have and what I have done, so how is that trying to buy into any group. I also said I could help set up stuff for the group, Is that buying in?

I apologize for the inconvenience but I would like someone to explain what Polymath is about.

I have been living under a rock for months now (or outside of the rock, depending on how you see it) and the threads I found were neither clear nor detailed about this matter.

What I understood is that recruitment is scarce and is currently invitation-only, and the they are looking for members with broad knowledge.

However, what is the group about?

What I did find was a few posts about setting up electronic equipment and others concerning computing and programming.

Seems pretty scarce considering the ambitious motif.

This is hilarious.

"Told multiple times that we do not offer one."

You told me once.

Then you exploded, acted as though you were above me.

Funny thing is, I was never planning on being in Polymath.

My plan was to revamp it. I didn't persistently try and purchase I spot, I was inquiring. The word persistent has the meaning "continuing firmly or obstinately in an opinion or course of action in spite of difficulty or opposition". Seems as though my approach was not continuous nor firm. This blacklist was a complete over reaction to the situation at hand. A simple reply "No there are no Polymath leadership spots available for purchase at the moment". Not your egotistical reply "Avoid asking this question or you will be blacklisted".

Thought I would clear this up for everyone. :3

"Told multiple times that we do not offer one."

You told me once.

Then you exploded, acted as though you were above me.

Funny thing is, I was never planning on being in Polymath.

My plan was to revamp it. I didn't persistently try and purchase I spot, I was inquiring. The word persistent has the meaning "continuing firmly or obstinately in an opinion or course of action in spite of difficulty or opposition". Seems as though my approach was not continuous nor firm. This blacklist was a complete over reaction to the situation at hand. A simple reply "No there are no Polymath leadership spots available for purchase at the moment". Not your egotistical reply "Avoid asking this question or you will be blacklisted".

Thought I would clear this up for everyone. :3

Spoiler (Click to View)

Thank you for posting the screenshot. I have enough PMs from members like you. We do not sell spots of any type. I told you this once that "avoid asking this question, or you will be blacklisted" then you still tried to do it, so there goes the blacklist. If you want to pursue this any further, take it through PM.

3. You had a warning from Sh1eld

I asked the second time because I thought you misunderstood me, I thought that you had thought I was asking how much for a regular spot, not a leadership spot. Hence why I said the following,

"I wasn't applying to be in Polymath.

I was asking about you selling Polymath all together."

I am not angry over being blacklisted one bit, I just feel as though you overreacted and attempted to make me look bad to the HF users, when in turn it was solely you that had caused this dispute.

Being a leader of a group you should probably have more integrity, more purpose. Rather than acting as though you are above others.

When you claim "I really do not have time to deal with another bullshit PM like this." Hush up, you have time, you are browsing Hackforums, clearly you have time.

Now if you would like to talk more about this and you don't want it sprawled across the Polymath thread, then feel free to PM me.

Now you're basing the "integrity" of Sh1eld as a group leader based on whether he gets pissed or not when he specifically tells you that he WILL neg you and pretty much ignore you if you respond? You already had an answer. You don't buy a leadership spot also means NO, you don't get to revamp the group by "buying" it.

Sh1eld is a busy guy, I bet that he does not have time for such things. I mean come on, you didn't hear about that specific member who wanted to buy in?

Sh1eld didn't act above you or anything like that, personally I'd have done the same if you came to me and asked to revamp MY group.

I didn't ask him twice, I corrected my first question incase he misunderstood. He did act above me, and I never said I was going to revamp HIS group. I was merely looking to purchase a spot, months into being a leader I may have suggested a change, but don't act as though I was planning on buying in and changing shit.

Also, you cant say "Sh1eld didn't act above you or anything like that, personally I'd have done the same if you came to me and asked to revamp MY group." because at the time, he had no idea what my intentions were.

If the leaders like you, and think you would go will and represent them well as a member of their group they will most likely private message you INVITING you or asking you to join based off of their own personal criteria of your performance here on the forums. Invite only is pretty self explanatory, not sure why it's so hard for users to grasp the meaning of it. Nevertheless, hope I cleared it up a little ?
