Thread: Just launched my partners and I company yesterday.. this is how many orders we got!:O

Aubretia - March 17, 2014, 7:42 am

So yeah.. We're selling booze... ;)

We got a lot of orders (20+)

We started out, by buying 6x6 bottles.. We already sold much more than that, so we went to buy 9x6 more bottles.. Aand.. they're sold.

Cha'ching!

how's your day?! :D

Obli - March 17, 2014, 8:36 am

If you're selling to minors, then you should put an end to your business. They will most likely get caught, and will take you in their fall.

Aubretia - March 17, 2014, 12:46 pm

First of all, no. We're not 21 years+, and it's not neccesary, as we live in Denmark.
Secondk, no. We do not sell to minors at all. We are strictly against that.

Thanks!

Jason™ - March 17, 2014, 12:47 pm

I'm confused. Are you re-selling the booze?

Aubretia - March 17, 2014, 12:49 pm

I'm buying the alcohol from a official supplier and reselling it. We're soon-2-be official with a CVR number. Registrated company.

Lion™ - March 17, 2014, 1:02 pm

Ah Denmark, I live there too. It is still illegal to sell to minors if you get under as a COMPANY.
edit: nvm no minors xd

We earn between $4-$1000 pr. bottle we sell. All depends on the bottle. We have cognac that costs $5000+ :)

Marko - March 20, 2014, 5:18 am

Oh you live in Denmark, good luck with taxes.

Hydraulic - March 21, 2014, 12:14 am

Dane checking in here as well. I assume you buy it from Germany and sell it in Denmark? Booze in Germany is a lot cheaper, every time we have a party we always go to Germany to buy our alcohol instead of buying it in Denmark.

Grey Goose - March 21, 2014, 3:08 am

Good luck mate, remember to send a bottle to me, you know my adress ;) ;)

No he is not. He wrote in the comments before, that he is buying them for the supplier. It's illegal to buy booze in Germany, and sell it in Denmark, without paying taxes and recycling on them.

I know it's illegal but I know a lot of people that do it.

Good luck with sales ect
i wish you the best luck ?

But the bottles on the pictures cost only €11,29 inc. taxes in The Netherlands.

Do you have pictures of the $5000 bottles?

Get Rich Or Die Trying - March 26, 2014, 8:26 am

Do you have an webiste with your produks? And sry to say it, but don't think you have cognac to +$5000.

Spending - March 27, 2014, 12:07 pm

Eyo. I am also from Denmark, how about you hit me up with some booze for my future parties? HF discount? :P

Why would you say that? We have whiskeys, that are 35+ years, single malt.. Costs more than than your income for 6 months.

Everything is free here in Denmark :-)

Inb4 " SKAT " comes and fuck you up bro ;-D

Good luck with sales! :-)

Danish too

Thought this was pretty cool until i read this, ha don't be one of those people bro!

Best of luck to you though, looks like its going well (y)

K?ng - March 29, 2014, 12:13 pm

Not sure what's up with you but 35 year single malt whiskey is like max $500...

Also, I just looked for some more high quality, aged, and expensive cognacs and There are barely any ones that are actually being sold for $5000.

I seriously call bullshit on this one. I can see you being successful in starting a company and all, but the prices you are saying you are selling your bottles are complete bullshit.

Disinformation - March 29, 2014, 3:38 pm

Yeah I'm not trusting the comments OP is making anymore lol, $4-1000 profit per bottle? Yeah ok. Never known a fine alcohol salesman who keeps the goods in his homes' kitchen. GJ on having your own company, regardless of sales figures. I'd also like to see some official documents though

Quiver - March 29, 2014, 5:11 pm

This is awesome! Good luck with your business!

Not2EXceL - March 29, 2014, 5:17 pm

All I see is a single bottle of Moet and a lot of Sourz. Sourz are like $20 a bottle, and the Moet doesnt look like an expensive bottle either, estimating no more than $50.

Do you have King Henry's feces in these bottles or something?

Davy - April 2, 2014, 2:53 am

Good luck with sales OP, pretty smart idea but im suprised it isnt over used.

I'm aware of all that ;-)

And to other people; We have cognacs and whiskeys that costs $$$... As well as champagnes..

blazerl33t - April 3, 2014, 3:17 am time for basic danish tax law yaaay

øl- og vinafgiftslovens § 1:

tax on 1 liter of clean alcohol 63,60dkk(11.75usd)

øl- og vinafgiftslovens § 3 B

tax on mixed drinks with 10 pct. vol. or below 7,90dkk(1.46usd) ea. L.

tax on mixed drinks above 10 pct. vol. 13,52dkk(2.50usd) ea. L.

company tax in denmark is 25% ov profits

low private tax in denmark is 43% after you'r monthly 3700dkk(683.73) tax free income

the most expensive cognac in denmark is around 7000dkk(1293.54usd)

the average danish makes 254.000(46937.17usd) yearly

just around 21,000dkk(3880.63) befor expenses a month

so i call bullshit on the new started company with a 5000usd cognac.

other then that i wish you good luck
